GERMAN CAVALRY WITHIN THIRTY MILES OF WARSAW

VEIL DRAWN OVER FIELD

Petrograd and Berlin Are Silent.

FIGHTING IN PROGRESS

Keen Interest Being Taken in Engagement in Poland.

London, Nov. 23.—The veil of secrecy has been drawn over the battles between Russians and Austro-German forces. The headquarters of both armies are confining themselves to the briefest statements concerning the hostilities, saying merely that fighting is in progress.

News coming from unofficial sources, however, shows that the German advance has penetrated farther into Poland than had been disclosed previously and that Warsaw is threatened for a second time. General von Hindenburg's army has advanced as far as the Lowicz-Skierniewice line, which means that the Germans have covered two-thirds of the ground to the Polish capital, from which they now are only forty miles.

Farther south in Poland, however, the Russian allies are said to have been repulsed between Radom and Kielce.

The battle in East Prussia seems to have died down, but the Russians continue to advance in Galicia and are still fighting on the Czenstochowa-Cracow front.

Critical Battle in Poland,

The battle in Poland, in the direction of Lowicz, is the most critical one and, while the Germans have the greatest confidence in General von Hindenburg since his defeat of the Russian General von Rennenkampf in East Prussia, here and in Petrograd military observers express the opinion that Russia's overwhelming superiority in numbers of men again must tell, as was the case when the Germans made their first attack on Warsaw.

In Flanders and in France the armies seem to be enjoying a long deserved rest, for the only remaining evidence that the belligerents are facing each other in an occasional bombardment with heavy guns. Infantry attacks have temporarily ceased and, while the generals are laying their plans for their next move, the men are getting a chance to rest and to tidy up themselves after a month in the water soaked trenches.

The Serbians are making a stand against the Austrians in well chosen fortified positions on the River Kolubara, but as the Austrians command superior forces and Serbia is without allies near enough to offer her assistance it seems apparent that unless other Balkan states come into the war Serbia is faced with defeat.

POLICE BLAME BLACK HAND

Eight Persons Perish in New York Tenement Fire.

New York, Nov. 23.—Detectives are seeking men, known to them as Black Handers, whom they suspect of responsibility for the fire which destroyed a five-story tenement house, in which eight persons lost their lives and seven more, including two fire captains, were injured. Panic caused the fatalities, say the police, as the building was amply equipped with fire escapes.

The police turned their attention to the Black Handers as the result of disclosures made to them by a tenant, who has been receiving Black Hand letters and upon whom a demand for $1,000 was made Friday, under threat of bodily harm.

TURKS REACH SUEZ CANAL

Official Statement Cites Defeat of British Forces.

London, Nov. 23.—Reuter's Constantinople correspondent, in a dispatch sent by way of Berlin, gives the following official Turkish statement:

"The Turkish troops have reached the Suez canal. In fighting near El Kantara, twenty-five miles south of Port Said, the English suffered heavy losses and took flight."

FRUSTRATE RAID ON ZEPPELIN FACTORY

Germans Bring Down One of Three British Airships.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Nov. 23.—Elaborate precautions which the Germans have taken for an emergency were responsible for the failure of the raid of three English aviators who swooped down upon this city with the object of destroying with bombs the Zeppelin balloon works. Anti-aero plane cannon and machine guns adapted to high angle fire defeated the accomplishment of the daring exploit and succeeded in bringing down one of the hostile craft and putting the others to flight.

When the airmen appeared at Friedrichshafen the anti-balloon cannon and the machine guns which had been placed in readiness opened fire. The Englishmen circled about the balloon hall for some time and dropped six bombs, two of which came so near to the building as to cause a tremor of apprehension among those watching the novel combat. Two other bombs struck houses in the city, damaging them severely and killing a man and wounding a woman.

One of the flyers then made a fearless attempt to cross the hall at a height of only a quarter of a mile. Bullets from the guns mounted on the tops of buildings, however, pierced the aeroplane's gasoline tank, causing the fuel to escape and forcing the pilot to glide to earth.

GENERAL DE WET AND FEW REBELS ESCAPE.

London, Nov. 23.—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram company from Pretoria says: "It is officially announced that General De Wet's rapidly dwindling rebel command became surrounded by loyal forces in the vicinity of Boschhof, on the River Vaal. General De Wet succeeded in escaping with only twenty-five men. The remainder of his force surrendered."

MUCKIE McDONALD IS GUILTY

Butte Mine Workers' President Given Three Years in Prison.

Boulder, Mont., Nov. 23.—Michael "Muckie" McDonald, president of the Butte Mine Workers' Union at the time of the miners' riots in Butte, was found guilty of kidnapping by a jury here and his punishment fixed at a term of three years in the Deer Lodge penitentiary.

Joseph Bradley, vice president of the union, was also convicted of kidnapping and his punishment fixed by the jury at five years in the penitentiary.

Special to Dispatch:

Petrograd, Nov. 23, 11:33 A. M.—German cavalry patrols have penetrated to within thirty miles of Warsaw, the capital of Poland. Heavy fighting is still in progress today between Lowicz and Skierniewice, where the Russian force is opposing the main line of the German advance under General Von Hindenburg. Reports received tell of the destruction of a German cavalry patrol ten miles in advance of the main battle line.

LONDON REVIEWS WAR OPERATIONS

Special to The Dispatch:—

London, Nov. 23, 2:50 P. M.—Berlin the battle in Russian Poland was the matter in Russian Poland was postponed by the arrival of Russian reinforcements. The Vienna statement claims progress at all points in Poland. Petrograd admits a partial Teutonic success, but claims the capture of Gumbinnen, in East Prussia. The Germans have resumed their artillery attacks at Ypres and claim to have driven a small British squadron off the coast of Neuport. Soissons and Rheims are again bombarded by Germans and activities have been resumed in the Argonne region.

MINIMUM WAGE LAW UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Special to The Dispatch:—

St. Paul, Nov. 23, 2:50 P. M.—Holding the minimum wage law passed by the 1913 legislature unconstitutional, Judge Catlin today handed down a decision ordering a temporary injunction against State Auditor Iverson and the members of the minimum wage commission from expending any further money in the work of the commission.

EXPECTED LIFE SENTENCE SAYS HE WILL WIELD GAVEL

North Dakota Murderer Surprised at Death Penalty.

Bottineau, N. D., Nov. 23.—Joseph Milo, twenty-four years old, was sentenced to death by hanging for the murder of J. N. Karst of Breckenridge, Minn., by stoning him to death. Milo pleaded guilty to the crime, having confessed.

Milo staggered when the jury returned its verdict, as he had expected to get off with a life sentence. He almost had to be carried out of the courtroom after hearing the verdict. It is seven years ago since a jury in North Dakota has meted out the death sentence for murder and more than ten years since such a sentence has been carried out.

GIVEN DISCRETIONARY POWER

Daniels Rescinds Instructions Sent Ships in Turkish Waters.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Secretary Daniels cabled Captain Decker of the cruiser Tennessee and Captain Oman of the cruiser North Carolina in the Eastern Mediterranean, giving discretionary authority to deal with emergencies that may arise in protecting American citizens and their interests in Turkey.

The secretary rescinded the order he sent last week directing both commanders to take no action whatever, pending an investigation of the firing on a launch from the Tennessee at Smyrna.

BIG JAPANESE ARMY READY

Half Million Men Can Be Sent to Europe in Two Months.

London, Nov. 23.—Arthur Diosis, founder of the Japan society and an authority on Anglo-Japanese affairs, says that Japan is ready to furnish a large army if it is found necessary to increase the allied forces in Europe.

"The Japanese army is in a state of readiness," Mr. Diosis says, "and if it is necessary to increase the allied forces in Europe the Japanese are willing and ready to supply immediately a large, admirably equipped and highly efficient army. The Transsiberian railway and an ample supply of Japanese steamships make the transportation of half a million men in two months an easy matter."

Mine Black Sea Coast.

Petrograd, Nov. 23.—It was announced officially that the Russian littoral of the Black sea has been mined. In many places for a distance of sixty miles out from the coast. Ships are absolutely forbidden to sail at night in or out of Russian ports on the Black sea, through the mouths of the Rivers Dnieper and Bug and in the Gulf of Kerch.

H. H. FLOWERS INSISTS HE HAS WON SPEAKERSHIP FIGHT.

St. Paul, Nov. 23.—The contest for the speakership of the next Minnesota house of representatives is ended and he is winner, H. H. Flowers of Cleveland said in a statement issued by him after his return from Duluth, where he conferred with members.

H. H. FLOWERS.

elect of the St. Louis county delegation.

"I now have sixty-seven votes for speaker, directly pledged and six more promised," he states.

Sixty-seven votes are necessary to elect. "My chief effort between now and the time the house convenes will be directed towards making up committee assignments," Flowers said.

FARM CENSUS IS PROPOSED

Planned to Expend $3,000,000 in Obtaining Statistics.

Washington, Nov. 23.—A proposition to appropriate $3,000,000 for an agricultural census of the United States will be urged in congress at the coming session. It already has been embodied in official estimates and will be considered by the appropriations committee of the two houses.

The figures have aroused strong opposition among some of the advocates of economy in government expenditures.

DELAYS ADVANCE ON MEXICO CITY

Villa Awaits American Evacuation of Vera Cruz.

TEAR UP RAILROAD TRACK

Retreating Carranza Troops Destroy Several Miles of Line Leading Into Mexican Capital—General Blanco Says He Will Turn Over Mexico City to Any Competent Authority.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 23.—The occupation by Villa of Mexico City has been delayed. It probably will not occur until after the evacuation of Vera Cruz by the American forces. This was indicated when it was learned that the retreating Carranza troops from Querentaro last week tore up several miles of railroad track leading into Mexico City.

Fighting is under way at Guadalupe, metropolis of the west coast country, according to unofficial reports. It was said a strong command of Villa troops was assaulting the Jalisco capital. Carranza's action in giving up Mexico City to the Villa forces without opposition, his agents here believe, was done for strategic reasons, which soon will bear fruit in a renewal of warfare.

There has been nothing to indicate that the Carranza faction has given up its efforts to combat the convention party.

QUIET IN MEXICO CITY

General Blanco Explains His Position in Interview.

Mexico City, Nov. 23.—Perfect order is being maintained in the capital. General Lucio Blanco, who took over supreme control of the city, has appointed local authorities in all the suburban towns. In an interview General Blanco said:

"I am neither a follower of General Carranza nor of General Villa, but a Mexican and a soldier. When I was asked to leave the city absolutely unprotected that the forces of Zapata might enter I refused, because my first duty was to the inhabitants. I will gladly turn over the city to a competent authority when such an authority shall arrive."

General Blanco ordered many automobiles which had been commandeered to be returned to their owners.

WAR SCANDAL IN BRITAIN

Daily Chronicle Demands an Inquiry Into Government Contracts.

London, Nov. 23.—Under the heading, "Is the War Office Being Fleeched," the Daily Chronicle makes a demand for an official inquiry regarding the government's contract for the purchase of galvanized and corrugated iron. The newspaper suggests that parliament ought to set up a vigilance committee "to keep an eye on all contracts made by the great war spending departments and nip scandals in the bud."

Regarding the iron contracts, the Chronicle says it believes it has evidence of a trade ring which is maintaining prices for government work as much as $9 per ton above the prices openly quoted for private persons.

DESPERADO IS SHOT DEAD

Negro, Believed to Have Killed Three and Injured Ten, Killed.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 23.—John Miller, a negro, believed by the authorities to be a desperado who has killed three persons and wounded ten others here within the past month was shot and killed by detectives trying to arrest him. Two detectives were wounded during the fight.

The desperado terrorized outlying sections of the city, firing on his victims from ambush. He killed a night watchman, a meat dealer and a grocer.

FIVE PRISONERS ARE SLAIN

Twelve More Wounded in Outbreak at Isle of Man.

Douglas, Isle of Man, Nov. 23.—Five alien prisoners were killed and twelve others were wounded seriously in Thursday's riot at the detention camp here. The riot was precipitated when some of the prisoners attempted to escape. These facts were brought out at an inquest held at the camp Friday.

SIR OLIVER LODGE.

Declares He Has Converses With Friends Who Have Died

LODGE TELLS OF SPIRITS

British Scientist Says He Has Converses With Dead Friends.

London, Nov. 23.—Sir Oliver Lodge, president of the Society for Psychical Research, in a lecture in Browning hall, Wallworth, made a striking declaration of his spiritual faith, expressing his absolute conviction in the future existence, and asserting that he had conversed with friends who have died.

"I say this," he said, "on definite scientific grounds. I say it because I know that certain friends of mine still exist, because I have talked with them. Communication is possible, but one must obey the laws to find out the conditions. I do not say it is easy, but I say it is possible."

BRYAN MAY LEAVE CABINET MARCH 4

Secretary of State to Lay Plans for 1916, Says Report.

Washington, Nov. 23.—From a usually well informed Democratic source the New York Herald hears that William Jennings Bryan will retire from the cabinet on or about March 4 next. Though the Herald has no official confirmation, so far as can be determined, where no ill wish to Mr. Bryan could be parent to the thought. No suggestion of a schism with President Wilson was contained in the report and the initiative for the change in the cabinet was said rather to lie with Mr. Bryan than with the president.

Mr. Bryan was described as desiring relief from the wearing routine of executive duties, which have become vastly magnified in the state department by the European war. The suggestion of the informant was that Mr. Bryan will leave the cabinet "to gird up the loins of Democracy" for the battle of 1916, a task to which Mr. Bryan referred in the last issue of the Commoner.

JEWEL THIEF GETS $20,000

Enters Chicago Store With False Key and Answers Alarm.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Jewels valued at $20,000 were stolen by a thief who entered the downtown store of Bloch & Meyer with a false key and answered in code the electric query of a burglar alarm agency.

GREAT ACTIVITY AT EMDEN

German Fleet Is Preparing for Decisive Action.

London, Nov. 23.—"Messages from North Holland state that unusual activity prevails at Emden," says a dispatch from the Exchange Telegraph company's correspondent at The Hague. The telegram continues: "Fishermen who daily cruise near the German waters say the German fleet is preparing for decisive action in the North sea. Prince Henry of Prussia was at Emden for an inspection of the torpedo and submarine craft."

URGES GOVERNOR TO ACT FIRMLY

Colorado Legislative Committee Reports on Strike.

STATE CAPABLE TO CONTROL

Finding of Investigators Say There is

No Further Need for Federal Troops and Call Attention to the Fact That All Able-bodied Men Are Liable for Duty in the Militia.

Denver, Nov. 23.—Colorado is prepared to dispense with the presence of federal troops in the coal strike district, according to the report of the committee of the legislature appointed last May, just made public.

The report made to Governor Ammons urged him to proclaim publicly that every able-bodied male citizen in the state between the age of eighteen and forty-five years is liable to be called to duty in the state militia.

"The state is prepared to resume its sovereignty," the report stated. "All citizens, labor and capital, all organizations should unite in a determination to procure industrial peace."

During the fourteen months since the coal miners' strike was called, the committee declared, "no governor of any state in this Union since the Civil war has been confronted with as serious problems as those you have faced."

"We believe," the report continues, "that the state is now in that position and we agree with you that you cannot, in fairness to the president, plead longer for federal aid, much as the same might be desired. You should, therefore, prepare to accept for the people of this state the responsibility of again being a state."

In suggesting the subject matter of the proposed proclamation the report directs attention to that section of the state constitution which provides that members of the state militia shall consist of "all able-bodied males between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, except those exempted by state or federal laws."

It is further suggested that the governor make it clear that the state troops must be respected, if it again becomes necessary to use them, that the order prohibiting the sale and importation of liquor and sale or importation of firearms be continued and that he "firmly assume the responsibility" placed upon him.

TURKEY EXPLAINS INCIDENT

Forts Fired on American Launch Merely as a Warning.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Turkey has explained the Tennessee incident and while the government withholds formal acceptance it is believed the explanation will be declared satisfactory so far as the firing on the Tennessee's launch is concerned. The Turkish explanation was made before the United States ambassador made an official inquiry.

Four days of anxiety was practically terminated with the receipt from Ambassador Henry Morgenthau of the Turkish government's explanation of the incident.

Turkey explained that the shots fired toward the launch of the American cruiser Tennessee were merely intended as the customary warning that the port of Smyrna was mined and closed to navigation.

CABINET CRISIS IMMINENT IN SPAIN.

Madrid, Nov. 23.—Dissension over the part Spain is to play in the war is expected to bring about the resignation of the cabinet. It is thought here the ministry will favor intervention in the conflict.

FIRE AROUND LITTLE ROCK

City Encircled by Burning Forests and Situation Is Critical.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 23.—Forest fires surrounded Little Rock. Reports received here indicate that the situation is apt to become critical if rain does not fall immediately. Communication throughout the state is crippled by the burning of telegraph and telephone poles.

During the fourteen months since the coal miners' strike was called, the committee declared, "no governor of any state in this Union since the Civil war has been confronted with as serious problems as those you have faced."

"We believe," the report continues, "that the state is now in that position and we agree with you that you cannot, in fairness, to the president, plead longer for federal aid, much as the same might be desired. You should, therefore, prepare to accept for the people of this state the responsibility of again being a state."

In suggesting the subject matter of the proposed proclamation the report directs attention to that section of the state constitution which provides that members of the state militia shall consist of "all able-bodied males between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, except those exempted by state or federal laws."

It is further suggested that the governor make it clear that the state troops must be respected, if it again becomes necessary to use them; that the order prohibiting the sale and importation of liquor and sale or importation of firearms be continued and that he "firmly assume the responsibility" placed upon him.

TURKEY EXPLAINS INCIDENT

Forts Fired on American Launch Merely as a Warning.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Turkey has explained the Tennessee incident and while the government withholds formal acceptance it is believed the explanation will be declared satisfactory so far as the firing on the Tennessee's launch is concerned. The Turkish explanation was made before the United States ambassador made an official inquiry.

Four days of anxiety was practically terminated with the receipt from Ambassador Henry Morgenthau of the Turkish government's explanation of the incident.

Turkey explained that the shots fired toward the launch of the American cruiser Tennessee were merely intended as the customary warning that the port of Smyrna was mined and closed to navigation.

CABINET CRISIS

IMMINENT IN SPAIN.

Madrid, Nov. 23.—Dissension over the part Spain is to play in the war is expected to bring about the resignation of the cabinet. It is thought here the ministry will favor intervention in the conflict.

FIRE AROUND LITTLE ROCK

City Encircled by Burning Forests and Situation Is Critical.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 23.—Forest fires surrounded Little Rock. Reports received here indicate that the situation is apt to become critical if rain does not fall immediately. Communication throughout the state is crippled by the burning of telegraph and telephone poles.

SPEAKS TEN LANGUAGES
Nick Christoff, Shoe Shiner, Talks
More Languages Than College Professor
Talk about making mousetraps in the woods and having the world beat a path through the brush to buy the goods, those lines of Emerson on efficiency and its rewards are discounted by Nick Christoff who runs a shoe shining parlor in Brainerd.
Nick is quiet and industrious and incidentally speaks English, Polish, Bohemian, Galician, Austrian, Russian, Servian, Greek, Roumanian and Bulgarian. Every day he is summoned to act as interpreter in some capacity or other, in municipal court, district court or other places.
The other day a Russian wanted him in court but Nick was stamped.
The man came from the Mongolian steppes and there was too much Chinese garbled with his Russian to separate any meaning from his talk.
That was the only case that could not be translated by Christoff, all the others in the various languages enumerated were so much duck soup for him when it was necessary for him to translate them.
"I tell you," said Nick confidentially, "I got to go to court so often doing my interpreter act that some days
I don't get to shine many shoes."
And business in the shop is good too, because many a man versed in the ten languages which Christoff handles as skillfully as his blacking brush, comes in to talk with him and incidentally has his shoes shined while he talks.

DYING GIRL SINGS HYMN.
Youth Who Shot Her Hears Her Song
of Death.
The last moments of Jennie E. Mc-Laughlin, a sixteen-year-old girl who was shot by her former sweetheart, furnished one of the most dramatic scenes that the nurses and physicians
at a Philadelphia hospital ever witnessed.
A doctor told the patient that she could not live. Her mother, who had been at the bedside almost constantly,
since the shooting, began to weep, but
the young girl smiled and told her mother not to be unhappy.
"I am going to a better world," she said, smiling. "And I wish you were coming with me. I am not unhappy and I have nothing to tell. The only thing I want to do before I go is to sing my favorite hymn."
She then lay back on her pillow and started to sing "Nearer My God, to Thee." Doctors, nurses and patients in the ward were silent as the girl sang the first two stanzas. In the middle of the third her voice became weak
and then failed her. A few minutes later she was dead.
One of those who heard the death
song was James Fraley, the youth who fired the fatal shot and then sent a bullet into his own stomach. He was lying in a critical condition in another ward.

DYING GIRL SINGS HYMN.

Youth Who Shot Her Hears Her Song
of Death.

The last moments of Jennie E. Mc-Laughlin, a sixteen-year-old girl who was shot by her former sweetheart,
furnished one of the most dramatic
scenes that the nurses and physicians
at a Philadelphia hospital ever witnessed.

A doctor told the patient that she could not live. Her mother, who had been at the bedside almost constantly,
since the shooting, began to weep, but
the young girl smiled and told her mother not to be unhappy.

"I am going to a better world," she said, smiling, "and I wish you were coming with me. I am not unhappy
and I have nothing to tell. The only thing I want to do before I go is to sing my favorite hymn."

She then lay back on her pillow and struggled to sing "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Doctors, nurses and patients
in the ward were silent as the girl sang the first two stanzas. In the middle of the third her voice became weak
and then failed her. A few minutes
later she was dead.

One of those who heard the death
song was James Fraley, the youth who fired the fatal shot and then sent a bullet into his own stomach. He was lying in a critical condition in another
ward.

EXPECTATIONS

The kid that lives next door to me is taken mighty queer. He says that Santa Claus won't be a-comin' round this year. He says we're poorer than we was. An' that's why he is sure that Santa Claus won't come, because He doesn't like the poor.

I guess I know we're poor, all right. My dad ain't got no job. An' all my mother does at night is lay awake an' sob. But I should think old Santa'd know that 'count o' this here war. He kids that's boosted for him so. Would need him all this more.

He must be rich as rich can be. For every Christmas day The papers tell about how he Gives loads o' toys away. I ain't expectin' him to bring A very awful lot. But, gee! I'd like some little thing To show he ain't forgot!

—James J. Montague in New York American.

Thanksgiving in Cromwell's Day. That Thanksgiving day was 200 years ago popularly and generally observed in England is well shown by the following passage:

For Hudibras who thought he 'ad won The field as certain as a gun And, having routed the whole troop, With victory was cock-a-whoop. 'Thinking he 'ad done enough to purchase Thanksgiving day among the churches.

Thus wrote Butler in 1651, during Oliver Cromwell's tenure of power, and it clearly proves that at a time when the observance of the day was but just beginning to be regularly kept in this country, the English recognized the day very generally as one of joy and feasting.

A Thanksgiving Wish.

We wish everybody good cheer, a finely whetted appetite, vigorous digestion and a pleasant reunion of the scattered members of the family. From the tottering grandfather to the tottering baby, a pleasant Thanksgiving to all!

Thanksgiving a Dual Holiday.

Thanksgiving is the one holiday that combines religion and patriotism. We should try to impress on the child each Thanksgiving both a feeling of thankfulness for his own blessings and a feeling of high patriotic pride.

WOMAN'S REALM

THE NUTRITIOUS CRACKER

Jane Eddington in Chicago Tribune Says the Cracker has Great Fuel or Food Value

An ordinary cracker, says Jane Eddington in the Chicago Tribune, has a fuel or food value of about one hundred calories, and ordinarily there are from twenty-three to twenty-four crackers in a five cent box.

It is easy to see that there may be as much as 2,400 calories of food in a five-cent box of crackers. This is considerably more than cornmeal yields, and it has been authoritatively declared that cornmeal yields more nutriment for the money than any other food known.

One of the government bulletins on corn gives the food value per pound of granulated cornmeal as 1,655 calories on one page and on another as 1,770, so perhaps the value fluctuates between these two. Unbolted cornmeal has a fuel value of 1,850 calories. But this shows pretty conclusively that a pound of crackers, all ready to eat and costing no more than cornmeal in small quantities, is quite equal to it as a yield of energy or body heat, and probably much superior.

It takes a rather large slice of bread or one of about two ounces' weight to yield one hundred calories. A whole pound of bread, if we got that much for our five cents, would then yield only about 800 calories, or about one-third as much energy making food as a pound of crackers.

Of course, one of the reasons why the cracker is so much more concentrated a product than bread is that it contains no moisture, while most bread contains too much for our health, exceedingly moist bread being indigestible for easily explainable reasons.

Crackers are baked until the moisture is entirely evaporated, and they have become dry, hard and brittle. They must be kept dry and cool, or they will absorb moisture. Therefore those sold in cellophane are far cleaner than those sold in bulk and more wholesome in every way. Crackers which have absorbed moisture from the atmosphere are not palatable, nor are they wholesome.

HOSPITAL IN MANSION.

Apartments of Dorchester House Occupied by Wounded Soldiers.

Presided over by Miss Muriel Wilson, society beauty, as nurse in charge, what is probably one of the most luxurious hospitals in the world has just been opened in London.

The new hospital is Dorchester house, in Park lane, the residence of the late Whitelaw Reid when he was United States ambassador to England. All the splendid apartments of the house are now occupied by wounded officers, and the great rooms where once the notables of the world were used to gather when Mr. Reid occupied the mansion are now filled with cots and beds and medicine tables and have become dormitories of a great war hospital.

The mansion is owned by Lieutenant Colonel Sir George Holford. He recently turned it over to the authorities as a hospital for wounded and convalescent officers. Sir Alfred Fripp, surgeon in ordinary to the king, is attending the wounded now there, while Miss Wilson, with a number of young society women as assistants, ministers to the comfort of the men. Eighteen officers are now billeted in bedrooms from which they can look out on Hyde park.

Cattle Plague Precautions Held No Excuse For Raising Prices.

The rise in the price of poultry of all kinds reported in various states cannot, in the opinion of experts in the United States department of agriculture, in any way be attributed to the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease. This disease does not affect poultry, and the federal quarantines of various states, fourteen in all, lay no embargo on shipments of poultry. For instance, Rhode Island can still send out her Thanksgiving turkeys, although no cattle, sheep or swine can leave her territory.

It is true that when a case of foot and mouth disease is found on a farm that farm is absolutely quarantined by the state or local authorities. No produce of any sort can leave it, the owner is not even permitted to drive his horses on the public highway, and in some cases his children are not permitted to go to school.

Since the disease is readily communicated from farm to farm by cats, dogs, poultry and human beings the local authorities exercise their own discretion in the restrictions placed on shipments of produce from the area in the immediate vicinity of the infected farm. These areas are so limited in extent, however, that the amount of poultry that may thus be prevented from reaching the Thanksgiving market is an inappreciable percentage of the total supply.

Poultry from the uninfected areas in the various quarantined states can be moved freely without the least danger of spreading the disease or of injuring the health of the consumer, according to the authorities.

DOVES SPREAD CHOLERA.

"Bird of Peace" Accused by Veterinarian, Will Be Shot by Farmers.

All the time the farmers of Walnut township have been entertaining pigeons, even building houses for them and encouraging them to stay, they have been entertaining so many vipers in their bosoms.

For the dove, emblem of peace and gentleness, is responsible for a loss to the farmers of the vicinity estimated at thousands of dollars, according to Dr. A. B. Niven, veterinarian in charge of the federal hog cholera station at Crawfordsville, Ind.

Under direction of Dr. Niven all farmers in the township will arm themselves with shotguns, determined to exterminate every pigeon found. Niven says they carry the germs of hog cholera from farm to farm.

Baby Poisons Grandmother.

Poisonous tablets, evidently mistaken for candy, caused the deaths of Hazel Roche, three, and her grandmother, Mrs. Edward Miller, sixty-four years old, in their home in Dobsonville, Conn. The little girl found the tablets in a bottle. After swallowing a few she placed a number of them in her grandmother's cup of tea. Mrs. Miller drank the cup before she noticed an unusual taste. Both died before medical aid arrived.

HOW EMDEN LOST HER LAST BATTLE

Eyewitness Describes Raid and Final Fight.

SURPRISED BY THE SYDNEY.

Left Landing Party of Forty-three Men, Who Escaped in Schooner While Two Ships Fought—Germans Blew Up Wireless Station, but Were Courteous to Operators.

The London Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Keeling, in the Cocos islands, Frederick Pollock, who was an eyewitness of the destruction of the German cruiser Emden by the Australian cruiser Sydney, sends a detailed account of the affair as follows:

At 6 o'clock in the morning a four funnelled cruiser arrived at full speed. Our suspicions were aroused, for she was flying no flag, and her fourth funnel was obviously a dummy made of painted canvas. Therefore we were not altogether surprised at the turn of events. The cruiser at once lowered away an armored launch and two boats, which came ashore and landed on Coral beach three officers and forty men, all fully armed and having four Maxim guns.

The Germans—for all doubt about the mysterious cruiser was now at an end—at once rushed up to the cable station and, entering the office, turned out the operators, smashed the instruments and set armed guards over all the buildings. All the knives and firearms found in possession of the cable staff were at once confiscated.

I should say here that in spite of the excitement on the outside all the work was carried on in the cable office as usual right up to the moment when the Germans burst in. A general call was sent out just before the wireless apparatus was blown up.

The whole of the staff was placed under an armed guard while the instruments were being destroyed, but it is only fair to say that the Germans, working in well disciplined fashion under their officers, were most civil. There was no such brutality as we hear characterized the German army's behavior toward civilians, and there were no attempts at pillaging.

Australian Cruiser Appears.

While the cable station was being put out of action the crew of the launch grappled for the cables and endeavored to cut them, but fortunately without success. The electrical stores were then blown up.

At 9 a. m. we heard the sound of a siren from the Emden, and this was evidently the signal to the landing party to return to the ship, for they at once dashed for the boats, but the Emden got under way at once, and the boats were left behind.

Looking to the eastward, we could see the reason for this sudden departure, for a warship, which we afterward learned was the Australian cruiser Sydney, was coming up at full speed in pursuit. The Emden did not wait to discuss matters, but, firing her first shot at a range of about 3,700 yards, steamed north as hard as she could go.

Range Finder Crippled.

At first the firing of the Emden seemed excellent, while that of the Sydney was somewhat erratic. This, as I afterward learned, was due to the fact the Australian cruiser's range finder was put out of action by one of the only two shots the Germans got home. However, the British gunners soon overcame any difficulties that this may have caused and settled down to their work, so that before long two of the Emden's funnels had been shot away. She also lost one of her masts quite early in the fight. Both blazing away with their big guns, the two cruisers disappeared below the horizon, the Emden being on fire.

After the great naval duel passed from our sight and we could turn our attention to the portion of the German crew that had been left behind we found that these men had put off in their boats obedient to the signal of the siren, but when their ship steamed off without them they could do nothing else but come ashore again. On relanding they lined up on the shore of the lagoon, evidently determined to fight to the finish if the British cruiser sent a party ashore. But the dueling cruisers had disappeared, and at 6 p. m. the German raiders embarked on the old schooner Ayessa, which belongs to Mr. Ross, the "uncrowned king" of the islands. Seizing a quantity of clothes and stores, they sailed out and have not been seen since.

Early the next morning, Tuesday, Nov. 10, we saw the Sydney returning, and at 8:45 a. m. she anchored off the island. From various members of the crew I gathered some details of the running fight with the Emden. The Sydney, having an advantage in speed, was able to keep out of range of the Emden's guns and to bombard her with her own heavier metal. The engagement lasted eighty minutes, the Emden finally running ashore on North Keeling island and becoming an utter wreck.

Only two German shots proved effective. One of these failed to explode, but smashed the main range finder and killed one man. The other killed three men and wounded fourteen.

HOMELESS MILLIONS OF WAR REFUGEES

Serious Problem Now Facing the Fighting Nations.

Three million refugees without homes or money, in many cases lacking sufficient clothing and even food, make one result of little more than two months of warfare in Europe.

The fall of Antwerp added fully 500,000 men, women and children to the already long list of homeless sufferers who must depend on the bounty of others for their keep. France, England, Germany, Austria, Russia and Belgium have all felt the effect of the

A GROUP OF BELGIAN REFUGEES. sufferings of this great army. England and France especially and the neutral nation of Holland have been the chief sufferers, for to them have come the homeless hordes of Belgians fleeing from their homes or driven out by the fire and sword that have swept through the country.

It is estimated that there are 1,000,000 refugees in France, more than half that number in England, at least 500,000 in Holland. Refugees from the border towns of Germany and the East Prussian territory occupied by Russia have fled to the interior in numbers that cannot be estimated. On the other hand, Russians from Poland and the border towns attacked by the Germans have been forced to flee to the interior.

Thousands of refugees from Galicia and the parts of Hungary occupied by the Russians have fled to the interior, and Vienna and other large Austrian and Hungarian cities are taxed to their utmost to care for them.

Besides those that have fled from their homes there are thousands in different parts of Belgium and parts of France, possibly starving and hopelessly facing the coming winter.

ROOSEVELT PLANS IN GREAT DOUBT

Friends Wonder What He Will Do in 1916.

NOT AS STRONG AS HE WAS

Bullet Wound in Last Campaign and South American Trip Impaired His Health—Efforts to Be Made Again to Increase Rates on Second Class Postage—Militia Will Be Improved.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Nov. 23.—[Special.]—While Theodore Roosevelt does not fill the public eye or the political vision as much as he did formerly, there are people who are still discussing his future. Two years ago there was talk of "back from Elba." Now we hear talk of "on to St. Helena."

Political prophets differ as to whether Roosevelt will be a candidate for president on the Progressive ticket in 1916 or whether he will even insist that the Progressives run another ticket. Much depends upon the way he happens to feel about it when 1916 comes.

Years ago a friend of mine made an observation concerning Roosevelt which fits him at the present time. It was when Harrison appointed Roosevelt as member of the civil service commission. "Heretofore," wrote the correspondent, "the civil service commission has been regarded as a fifth wheel on the governmental coach. It will be no longer. If it does not take its proper place in the government Mr. Roosevelt will revolve recklessly in the midst of the machinery."

Subject of Constant Agitation.

There are people in the postoffice department who have for nearly a quarter of a century been interested in securing an increase of rates on second class mail. It seems to be passed on from one postal official to another, and sometimes they are able to interest the postmaster general in the subject.

A year ago Postmaster General Burleson urged that the recommendation of the Hughes commission be adopted, which doubled the present second class rates. He will renew that recommendation in his coming report, although he has little hope of any action being taken. There is not much disposition to impose an additional burden upon the newspapers and magazines by increasing rates.

It Is Not Yet General Goethals.

Without a dissenting voice the house of representatives passed a bill to promote Colonel Goethals to be major general in the army as a reward for constructing the Panama canal. The bill was hung up in the senate for six weeks without any action. The friends of Colonel Goethals do not understand why there should have been any delay, but they intend to work for speedy action when congress convenes in December.

Must Make the Most of It.

Jerry Donovan has less than three months in which to create disturbances in the house by insisting on everybody toeing the mark. Since election some one has recalled an incident that occurred in the house a few months before the election. Donovan was having a row with Jim Mann and declared that the minority leader knew everything that had happened in the past and all about the present and pretended to read the future.

"I can read your future, all right," retorted Mann. "You are serving your first and last term in congress."

To Better the Militia.

It is expected that if any action is

"Point of Order" Fowler.

There are quite a number of Democratic members of the house who do not regret in the least the defeat of Robert H. Fowler of Illinois. During the two terms that Fowler has served in the house he has become known as "Point of Order" Fowler because he made it his business to raise a point of order in fighting appropriation bills. His main attack was upon salaries that had been increased even if they were the same salaries that had been paid for the last twenty-five years. While he made a record in this regard he did not change the salaries because the increases were restored by the senate and, of course, accepted by the house conferees who had originally prepared the bill.

EXPECTATIONS

The kid that lives next door to me is taking mighty queer. He says that Santa Claus won't be a-comin' round this year. He says we're poorer than we was an' that's why he is sure that Santa Claus won't come, because He doesn't like the poor.

I guess I know we're poor, all right. My dad ain't got no job. An' all my mother does at night is lay awake an' sob. But I should think old Santa'd know that count of this here war. He kids that's boosted for him so. Would need him all the more.

He must be rich as rich can be. For every Christmas day The papers tells about how he Gives loads o' toys away. I ain't expectin' him to bring A very awful lot. But, gee! I'd like some little thing To show he ain't forgot!

—James J. Montague in New York American.

Thanksgiving in Cromwell's Day. That Thanksgiving day was 200 years ago popularly and generally observed in England is well shown by the following passage:

For Hudibras who thought he 'ad won The field as certain as a gun And, having routed the whole troop, With victory was cock-a-noop. Thinking he 'ad done enough to purchase Thanksgiving day among the churches.

Thus wrote Butler in 1651, during Oliver Cromwell's tenure of power, and it clearly proves that at a time when the observance of the day was but just beginning to be regularly kept in this country, the English recognized the day very generally as one of joy and feasting.

A Thanksgiving Wish. We wish everybody good cheer, a finely whetted appetite, vigorous digestion and a pleasant reunion of the scattered members of the family. From the tottering grandfather to the tottering baby, a pleasant Thanksgiving to all!

Thanksgiving a Dual Holiday. Thanksgiving is the one holiday that combines religion and patriotism. We should try to impress on the child each Thanksgiving both a feeling of thankfulness for his own blessings and a feeling of high patriotic pride.

WOMAN'S REALM

THE NUTRITIOUS CRACKER

Jane Eddington in Chicago Tribune Says the Cracker has Great Fuel or Food Value

An ordinary cracker, says Jane Eddington in the Chicago Tribune, has a fuel or food value of about one hundred calories, and ordinarily there are from twenty-three to twenty-four crackers in a five cent box.

It is easy to see that there may be as much as 2,400 calories of food in a five-cent box of crackers. This is considerably more than cornmeal yields, and it has been authoritatively declared that cornmeal yields more nutriment for the money than any other food known.

One of the government bulletins on corn gives the food value per pound of granulated cornmeal as 1,655 calories on one page and on another as 1,770, so perhaps the value fluctuates between these two. Unbolted cornmeal has a fuel value of 1,850 calories. But this shows pretty conclusively that a pound of crackers, all ready to eat and costing no more than cornmeal in small quantities, is quite equal to it as a yield of energy or body heat, and probably much superior.

It takes a rather large slice of bread or one of about two ounces' weight to yield one hundred calories. A whole pound of bread, if we got that much for our five cents, would then yield only about 800 calories, or about one third as much energy-making food as a pound of crackers.

Of course, one of the reasons why the cracker is so much more concentrated a product than bread is that it contains no moisture, while most bread contains too much for "our health," expendingly moist bread being indigestible for easily explainable reasons.

Crackers are baked until the moisture is entirely evaporated, and they have become dry, hard and brittle. They must be kept dry and cool, or they will absorb moisture. Therefore those sold in cations are far cleaner than those sold in bulk and more wholesome in every way. Crackers which have absorbed moisture from the atmosphere are not palatable, nor are they wholesome.

HOSPITAL IN MANSION.

Apartments of Dorchester House Occupied by Wounded Soldiers.

Presided over by Miss Muriel Wilson, society beauty, as nurse in charge, what is probably one of the most luxurious hospitals in the world has just been opened in London.

The new hospital is Dorchester house, in Park lane, the residence of the late Whitelaw Reid when he was United States ambassador to England. All the splendid apartments of the house are now occupied by wounded officers, and the great rooms where once the notables of the world were used to gather when Mr. Reid occupied the mansion are now filled with cots and beds and medicine tables and have become dormitories of a great war hospital.

The mansion is owned by Lieutenant Colonel Sir George Holford. He recently turned it over to the authorities as a hospital for wounded and convalescent officers. Sir Alfred Fripp, surgeon in ordinary to the king, is attending the wounded now there, while Miss Wilson, with a number of young society women as assistants, ministers to the comfort of the men. Eighteen officers are now billeted in bedrooms from which they can look out on Hyde park.

NO BAN HAS BEEN PLACED ON THANKSGIVING BIRD.

Cattle Plague Precautions Held No Excuse For Raising Prices.

The rise in the price of poultry of all kinds reported in various states cannot, in the opinion of experts in the United States department of agriculture, in any way be attributed to the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease. This disease does not affect poultry, and the federal quarantines of various states, fourteen in all, lay no embargo on shipments of poultry. For instance, Rhode Island can still send out her Thanksgiving turkeys, although no cattle, sheep or swine can leave her territory.

It is true that when a case of foot and mouth disease is found on a farm that farm is absolutely quarantined by the state or local authorities. No produce of any sort can leave it, the owner is not even permitted to drive his horses on the public highway, and in some cases his children are not permitted to go to school.

Since the disease is readily communicated from farm to farm by cats, dogs, poultry and human beings the local authorities exercise their own discretion in the restrictions placed on shipments of produce from the area in the immediate vicinity of the infected farm. These areas are so limited in extent, however, that the amount of poultry that may thus be prevented from reaching the Thanksgiving market is an inappreciable percentage of the total supply.

Poultry from the uninfected areas in the various quarantined states can be moved freely without the least danger of spreading the disease or of injuring the health of the consumer, according to the authorities.

DOVES SPREAD CHOLERA.

"Bird of Peace" Accused by Veterinarian, Will Be Shot by Farmers.

All the time the farmers of Walnut township have been entertaining pigeons, even building houses for them and encouraging them to stay, they have been entertaining so many vipers in their bosoms.

For the dove, emblem of peace and gentleness, is responsible for a loss to the farmers of the vicinity estimated at thousands of dollars, according to Dr. A. B. Niven, veterinarian in charge of the federal hog cholera station at Crawfordville, Ind.

Under direction of Dr. Niven all farmers in the township will arm themselves with shotguns, determined to exterminate every pigeon found. Niven says they carry the germs of hog cholera from farm to farm.

Baby Poisons Grandmother.

Poisonous tablets, evidently mistaken for candy, caused the deaths of Hazel Roche, three, and her grandmother, Mrs. Edward Miller, sixty-four years old, in their home in Dobsonville, Conn. The little girl found the tablets in a bottle. After swallowing a few she placed a number of them in her grandmother's cup of tea. Mrs. Miller drained the cup before she noticed an unusual taste. Both died before medical aid arrived.

Eyewitness Describes Raid and Final Fight.

SURPRISED BY THE SYDNEY.

Left Landing Party of Forty-three Men, Who Escaped in Schooner While Two Ships Fought—Germans Blew Up Wireless Station, but Were Courteous to Operators.

The London Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Keeling, in the Cocos islands, Frederick Pollock, who was an eyewitness of the destruction of the German cruiser Emden by the Australian cruiser Sydney, sends a detailed account of the affair as follows:

At 6 o'clock in the morning a four funneled cruiser arrived at full speed. Our suspicions were aroused, for she was flying no flag, and her fourth funnel was obviously a dummy made of painted canvas. Therefore we were not altogether surprised at the turn of events. The cruiser at once lowered away an armored launch and two boats, which came ashore and landed on Coral beach three officers and forty men, all fully armed and having four Maxim guns.

The Germans—for all doubt about the mysterious cruiser was now at an end—at once rushed up to the cable station and, entering the office, turned out the operators, smashed the instruments and set armed guards over all the buildings. All the knives and firearms found in possession of the cable staff were at once confiscated.

I should say here that in spite of the excitement on the outside all the work was carried on in the cable office as usual right up to the moment when the Germans burst in. A general call was sent out just before the wireless apparatus was blown up.

The whole of the staff was placed under an armed guard while the instruments were being destroyed, but it is only fair to say that the Germans, working in well disciplined fashion under their officers, were most civil. There was no such brutality as we hear characterizes the German army's behavior toward civilians, and there were no attempts at pillaging.

Australian Cruiser Appears.

While the cable station was being put out of action the crew of the launch grappled for the cables and endeavored to cut them, but fortunately without success. The electrical stores were then blown up.

At 9 a. m. we heard the sound of a siren from the Emden, and this was evidently the signal to the landing party to return to the ship, for they at once dashed for the boats, but the Emden got under way at once, and the boats were left behind.

Looking to the eastward, we could see the reason for this sudden departure, for a warship, which we afterward learned was the Australian cruiser Sydney, was coming up at full speed in pursuit. The Emden did not wait to discuss matters, but, firing her first shot at a range of about 3,700 yards, steamed north as hard as she could go.

Range Finder Crippled.

At first the firing of the Emden seemed excellent, while that of the Sydney was somewhat erratic. This, as I afterward learned, was due to the fact the Australian cruiser's range finder was put out of action by one of the only two shots the Germans got home. However, the British gunners soon overcame any difficulties that this may have caused and settled down to their work, so that before long two of the Emden's funnels had been shot away. She also lost one of her masts quite early in the fight. Both blazing away with their big guns, the two cruisers disappeared below the horizon, the Emden being on fire.

After the great naval duel passed from our sight and we could turn our attention to the portion of the German crew that had been left behind we found that these men had put off in their boats obedient to the signal of the siren, but when their ship steamed off without them they could do nothing else but come ashore again. On relanding they lined up on the shore of the lagoon, evidently determined to fight to the finish if the British cruiser sent a party ashore. But the dueling cruisers had disappeared, and at 6 p. m. the German raiders embarked on the old schooner Ayessa, which belongs to Mr. Ross, the "uncrowned king" of the islands. Seizing a quantity of clothes and stores, they sailed out and have not been seen since.

Early the next morning, Tuesday, Nov. 10, we saw the Sydney returning, and at 8:45 a. m. she anchored off the island. From various members of the crew I gathered some details of the running fight with the Emden. The Sydney, having an advantage in speed, was able to keep out of range of the Emden's guns and to bombard her with her own heavier metal. The engagement lasted eighty minutes, the Emden finally running ashore on North Keeling island and becoming an utter wreck.

Only two German shots proved effective. One of these failed to explode, but smashed the main range finder and killed one man. The other killed three men and wounded fourteen.

HOMELESS MILLIONS OF WAR REFUGEES

Serious Problem Now Facing the Fighting Nations.

Three million refugees without homes or money, in many cases lacking sufficient clothing and even food, make one result of little more than two months of warfare in Europe.

The fall of Antwerp added fully 500,000 men, women and children to the already long list of homeless sufferers who must depend on the bounty of others for their keep. France, England, Germany, Austria, Russia and Belgium have all felt the effect of the

A GROUP OF BELGIAN REFUGEES. Sufferings of this sort army, England and France especially and the neutral nation of Holland have been the chief sufferers, for to them have come the homeless hordes of Belgians fleeing from their homes or driven out by the fire and sword that have swept through the country.

It is estimated that there are 1,000,000 refugees in France, more than half that number in England, at least 500,000 in Holland. Refugees from the border towns of Germany and the East Prussian territory occupied by Russia have fled to the interior in numbers that cannot be estimated. On the other hand, Russians from Poland and the border towns attacked by the Germans have been forced to flee to the interior.

Thousands of refugees from Galicia and the parts of Hungary occupied by the Russians have fled to the interior, and Vienna and other large Austrian and Hungarian cities are taxed to their utmost to care for them.

Besides those that have fled from their homes there are thousands in different parts of Belgium and parts of France, possibly starving and hopelessly facing the coming winter.

ROOSEVELT PLANS IN GREAT DOUBT

Friends Wonder What He Will Do in 1916.

NOT AS STRONG AS HE WAS

Bullet Wound in Last Campaign and South American Trip Impaired His Health—Efforts to Be Made Again to Increase Rates on Second Class Postage—Militia Will Be Improved.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Nov. 23.—[Special.]—While Theodore Roosevelt does not fill the public eye or the political vision as much as he did formerly, there are people who are still discussing his future. Two years ago there was talk of "back from Elba." Now we hear talk of "on to St. Helena."

Political prophets differ as to whether Roosevelt will be a candidate for president on the Progressive ticket in 1916 or whether he will even insist that the Progressives run another ticket. Much depends upon the way he happens to feel about it when 1916 comes.

Years ago a friend of mine made an observation concerning Roosevelt which fits him at the present time. It was when Harrison appointed Roosevelt as member of the civil service commission. "Heretofore," wrote the correspondent, "the civil service commission has been regarded as a fifth wheel on the governmental coach. It will be so no longer. If it does not take its proper place in the government Mr. Roosevelt will revolve recklessly in the midst of the machinery."

Not the Man He Was.

Close friends of Colonel Roosevelt say that he is not the man physically that he was a few years ago. The gunshot wound that he received in the campaign of 1912 and the South American trip have taken a great deal out of him. It is scarcely to be expected that a man could go through as much as Colonel Roosevelt without showing signs of wear and tear, at least physically if not mentally. Colonel Roosevelt may not feel like conducting a vigorous campaign two years from now, even as the leader of the Progressive party.

Subject of Constant Agitation.

There are people in the postoffice department who have for nearly a quarter of a century been interested in securing an increase of rates on second class mail. It seems to be passed on from one postal official to another, and sometimes they are able to interest the postmaster general in the subject.

A year ago Postmaster General Burleson urged that the recommendation of the Hughes commission be adopted, which doubled the present second class rates. He will renew that recommendation in his coming report, although he has little hope of any action being taken. There is not much disposition to impose an additional burden upon the newspapers and magazines by increasing rates.

It Is Not Yet General Goethals.

Without a dissenting voice the house of representatives passed a bill to promote Colonel Goethals to be major general in the army as a reward for constructing the Panama canal. The bill was hung up in the senate for six weeks without any action. The friends of Colonel Goethals do not understand why there should have been any delay, but they intend to work for speedy action when congress convenes in December.

Must Make the Most of It.

Jerry Donovan has less than three months in which to create disturbances in the house by insisting on everybody toiling the mark. Since election some one has recalled an incident that occurred in the house a few months before the election. Donovan was having a row with Jim Mann and declared that the minority leader knew everything that had happened in the past and all about the present and pretended to read the future.

"I can read your future, all right," retorted Mann. "You are serving your first and last term to congress."

To Better the Militia.

It is expected that if any action is

"Doctor Camp is dead." When this startling information was passed from mouth to mouth on Sunday the populace could scarcely believe the truth of the statement, and indeed many who heard questioned the next man he met and asked if the statement was true. Doctor Camp was probably as widely known to the citizens of Brainerd and Crow Wing county as any man and the news of his sudden death as he peacefully slept came as a shock, although his intimate acquaintances knew that his health was not of the best. In his death Brainerd loses a valuable citizen, and his friends, who were legion, mourn the loss of one who was always loyal to their interests. A man who never turned a deaf ear to a request from the poor and needy, and who in his professional career responded whenever called regardless of condition and surroundings. Dr. Camp's pleasing smile and interesting personality will be missed in the daily walks of life of his intimate friends, but his memory will last, and his good traits will not soon be forgotten by those with whom he has been associated as citizen, neighbor and companion for a lifetime. Peace be to his ashes.

EDITOR OF "THE HUMP"

T. E. Dahljem, Prominent Member of the Order From Superior, Wis., is in the City

T. E. Dahljem, of Superior, Wis., editor of "The Hump," a weekly devoted to the interests of the Camels of the World, of the Northwest, is in the city today and visiting A. W. Tracy, the organizer at present working on establishing a temple here.

Superior Temple, said Mr. Dahljem, has 610 Camels in its folds and the Duluth Temple is also a large organization. It is expected that when the Brainerd Temple is instituted that large delegations from Superior and Duluth will make the pilgrimage to Brainerd to see that the new lodge gets the proper start.

The Hump periodical is now nine weeks old and has 1,469 paid in advance subscribers and its columns show considerable advertising patronage.

It is mailed to 16 cities in 14 states of the union. Mr. Dahljem says that Mr. Tracy organized the temple in Superior and made it one of the best fraternal institutions in that city.

To Editor of the Dispatch:

Dear Sir:

It has seemed a pity that in a town the size of Brainerd which does not enjoy many good entertainments two or more should ever occur in the same evening. Especially is this true if there is anything being given which should be of general appeal. Cooperation would conserve its forces along this line and to this end would it not be a feasible plan if there could be kept a calendar of coming events where plans could be recorded and referred to. I desire to commend this to the consideration of the Chamber of Commerce.

Very sincerely,

A SUBSCRIBER.

DEVELOPMENTS OF WEEK ON RANGE

Sinking is in Progress at the No. 2 Shaft of the Cuyuna-Sultana Iron Company

TWO MINES ARE STOCKPILING
Capt. G. A. Anderson, of Rogers, Brown Ore Co., Has Made One of Best Records on Range

Sinking is progressing as usual at shaft No. 2 of the Cuyuna-Sultana Iron company. It is the intention of the company to sink to the 100 foot level and commence drifting from that point. The drifts will run north, west, south and east and three shifts will be employed in the work. The company is, at present, contemplating the improving of the road which runs from the southeast corner of their property to Ironton. When this road is in fair condition, the distance to Ironton will be shortened by one-half. The property will be easily accessible and it will not be necessary to take the Pennington road and cross the Cuyuna-Mille Laes property to reach the mine. This improvement will be appreciated not only by the miners who are employed by the Sultana, but by the public in general who have occasion to visit either one of the last named properties.

It is reported that Dr. Walter Harvey Weed, the well known geologist, will spend three or four days on the Sultana and Cuyuna-Mille Laes properties the coming week. It is hoped that shaft No. 2 will be nicely in the ore body at the time of Dr. Weed's visit.

The Cuyuna-Mille Laes and the Cuyuna-Duluth mines of the American Manganese Manufacturing Co. at Ironton have closed down. E. J. W. Donahue, of the company, says this is but temporary, pending changes in pumpage. The pumps of both mines are continuing to run. At the Cuyuna-Mille Laes mine a 1,600 gallon electric pump is being installed, currently supplied by the Cuyuna Range Power company. The 20,000 tons stockpile at the Cuyuna-Duluth mine has been shipped, also the 23,000 tons stockpile at the Cuyuna-Mille Laes mine. Ironton people believe the mines will start up again in a very short time.

O. J. Wendlandt, president of the Duluth-Brainerd Iron Co. states that a short time option has been made to a strong eastern furnace company, covering a turning of the holdings at favorable prices. Indications were very favorable to making a turn on this deal. A full meeting of stockholders has been called at Duluth, Thursday evening, November 26.

There has been filed the agreement made between the Brainerd-Cuyuna Mining Co. and John O. Martin and Charles C. Jones covering the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 1, township 44, range 31 and the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter, the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter, part of the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section 36, township 45, range 31, whereby the mining company is to pay five cents a ton royalty, half to Martin and half to Jones, on the royalty covering the lease made by the late George W. Holland. This lease provided for 25 cents a ton royalty and the minimum tonnage was to be 5,000 tons for each of the first three years from each forty and 25,000 tons a year from each forty for the balance of the 50 year term. Recently there has been filed the indenture between John O. Martin of Duluth and the Carlson Exploration Co., whereby Martin sells his 2 1/2 cent royalty to the Carlson people. He shall have, however, all royalties due him under the agreement up to and including Sept. 30, 1914.

The Cuyuna range has now but two producing mines, the rest having shut down or being engaged in stripping or sinking operations. The old standbys of the district, the Armour No. 2 of the Rogers, Brown Ore Co. near Crosby, is engaged in stockpiling and is hoisting about 20,000 tons a month. The Kennedy mine of the same company, situated at Cuyuna, is also stockpiling, hoisting about 16,000 tons a month. Capt. G. A. Anderson, of Crosby, is in charge and he has made one of the best mining records of any mining captain on the entire range. It may be truthfully said that without Capt. Anderson there would have been no shaft at the Kennedy mine, the first producer on the range. He combated quicksand and hundred other discouragements on the new range and attained success with the property.

The Adams mine, underground proposition at the town of Oreland, as closed down for the winter. The Armour No. 1 did not ship this year. They still have a small stockpile at the mine.

The Rowe mine, big pit mine of the Pittsburgh Steel Ore Co. at Riverton, contemplate the erection of a $1,000,000 concentrating plant to wash ores, provided permission can be gained to dam across Rabbit lake near Riverton. A similar plant is at the Bovey-Coleraine pit and at Nashauk. A steam shovel is stripping there, the hydraulic proposition having closed down. Through Attorney John G. Williams the Pittsburgh Steel company has consulted with state and federal officials in an effort to determine whether the company can build a dam across Little Rabbit lake from Riverton, and later construct a concentration plant opposite Riverton. Mr. Williams at St. Paul took up the matter with Attorney General Lyndon A. Smith. It is reported that the improvement would mean an expenditure of $1,000,000. Mr. Williams said he had no knowledge of the estimated cost and declared that he does not believe there will be any legal obstacles to delay the improvement.

As Rabbit lake is connected with the Mississippi river, Mr. Williams has consulted with Lieutenant Colonel Potter, U. S. army engineer, for information as to the attitude the federal government will take on the proposition.

"We do not expect any legal questions to interfere with the work," said Mr. Williams, "but the company desired to have necessary information along this line before going any further with plans. The company is shipping ore mined at Riverton to outside concentrators, and, as I understand it, is considering various details preparatory to building a dam for power purposes and erecting a concentrating plant."

The Inland Steel Co. Thompson pit mine is stripping with steam shovels. The Pennington pit mine has closed for the winter.

At the Crow Wing county poor farm the longyear Exploration company is drilling its eighth hole. Ore was previously found in five of the seven holes put down, the seventh showing up particularly well.

The Brainerd-Cuyuna mine in the city limits of Brainerd is down 60 feet with its timber drop shaft, being sunk under the supervision of D. C. Peacock, of Brainerd. The Wilcox mine of the Canadian-Cuyuna Ore Co. at Woodrow is drifting having advanced about 100 feet and expects to reach the ore body very soon. They are pumping about 200 gallons a minute.

In speaking of business depressions Judge J. T. Hale, of Deerwood, said that it was remarkable how many sub-cellars there could be to hard times, making this observation in reply to a man who said he thought the bottom in hard times had been reached. There is no doubt that the cheap price of ore has curtailed production on the range until such time as things pick up again.

The manganese situation again commands attention on the Cuyuna. With England, Russia and India shutting off shipments, there remains a small supply in Brazil and the balance will have to come from the Cuyuna iron range.

The coming reports of the Minnesota State Tax Commission on the first taxation of Cuyuna range lands as mineral lands is awaited with interest.

The Croft mine is making a good showing, the superintendent being John A. Savage, of Duluth. A recent visitor at the mine was W. A. Barrows, Jr., of Brainerd. A steel and concrete shaft is being sunk and has now reached a depth of 68 feet. The mine will probably ship next year. In equipment and methods the Croft mine is one of the most up to date on the Cuyuna range. No waste or extravagance has been shown in its management or equipment.

There has been filed an indenture between the C. M. Hill Lumber company, a corporation of Michigan, the Hill Consolidated Mines Co., a corporation of Maine and Peter Drummond and B. Magoffin, Jr., agreeing to pay each 2 1/2 cents a ton royalty. The Hill Lumber Co. now leases to the Hill Consolidated Mines Co. for a term commencing Oct. 8, 1914, and expiring January 1, 1961, at 45 cents a ton. The royalty is distributed as follows: Fee owners 35 cents a ton, Drummond 2 1/2 cents, Magoffin 2 1/2 cents, Hill Lumber Co. 5 cents. There shall be mined and shipped not less than 25,000 tons a year.

A shaft agreement has been filed, the parties to the agreement being Hans Anderson and wife, the original fee owners; R. C. Jamison, Albert F. Gross, Edmund F. Gross, D. C. Peacock, John D. Lamont, second parties; the Alexandria Security Co., B. Magoffin, Jr., John W. Williams, third parties; the Cuyuna Realty Co., fourth party; the Merrimac Mining Co., fifth party. On October 13, 1909 the Andersons leased their land in the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 1, township 46, range 29 to R. C. Jamison, D. C. Peacock and Albert F. Gross, for a term expiring October 13, 1969. They then subleased to the Cuyuna Realty Co. In June 12, 1914 the Alexandria Security Co., B. Magoffin, Jr. and John G. Williams leased part of the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 1, township 46, range 29 to the Cuyuna Realty Co. which sublet to the Merrimac Mining Co. It is now agreed that both tracts shall constitute one ore body and in the interests of economical mining operations the tract can be better mined through one common shaft. It is agreed that the shaft be constructed on tract No. 1 at approximately the point where it has been located. Ore mined is not to be mixed.

Morrill W. King has assigned to Charles Linnaeus Smith a mining lease covering the south half of the north half of section 20, township 47, range 28.

The Iron Trade Review, under date of November 19 says that improvement is no longer confined to a more hopeful feeling, but has taken the form of a very encouraging increase in orders for pig iron and a slight increase in activity in some finished lines. The disheartening dullness which prevailed in all products until a couple of weeks ago has almost entirely disappeared and even old material, which descended to unprecedented depths, shows some signs of improvement in buying.

Many melters of pig iron, including some important companies, apparently are convinced that no mistake can be made in buying at the present prices and are showing much more decided disposition than for a long time to place considerable tonnage.

The inquiry of the New-York Central for 25,000 tons of rails for delivery beginning in December and extending into next year is the only tonnage of importance which has been inquired for by any of the large railroad systems as a part of the 1915 requirements. The Pennsylvania Steel Co. has received an order for 3,500 tons, but other orders booked are for less than 1,000 tons, and are not numerous. The locomotive business shows a little more life. Car building has not improved.

The present outlook is that, with the co-operation of the governments of the United States and Great Britain, it will be possible to import enough ferro-manganese to meet the requirements of consumers of this country, but it will be necessary to guarantee that none of the alloy will become the property of any consumers in the countries now at war.

CHANCE TO CARRY MAIL

Government is Calling for Bids on Route No. 41,153, Round Trips Garrison to Brainerd

On June 30th, 1915, contracts for carrying mail on government star routes will expire and proposals are being solicited by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General up until January 19, 1915, for the carrying of mail on all routes in Minnesota and adjoining states. Among the number is route 41,153, from Garrison, by Flak, to Brainerd, 22 miles and back, three times a week. The duties require the carrier to leave Garrison Monday, Wednesday and Friday, at 12:15 p. m., and arrive at Brainerd at 6 o'clock. Returning leave Brainerd Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 12:15 p. m. arriving at Garrison at 6 o'clock. The bond required with the bid is $1,300, and all information regarding the matter be obtained by inquiring at the Brainerd postoffice of Assistant Postmaster Grewcos.

PEACE IN MEXICO STILL A DREAM

Most Optimistic Now Think Intervention Inevitable.

EASY TO RAISE AN ARMY.

With Bandits Roaming Around Anxious to Make Money They Seize Opportunity to Join Any Regiment—Good Road Advocates Plan to Resume Fight on Reconvening of Congress.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Nov. 21.—[Special.]—Even the most optimistic persons have come to the conclusion that there is little hope of a peaceable solution of Mexican affairs. It seems there is no possibility of avoiding intervention in Mexico eventually.

The United States had two courses to pursue. One was to take no interest in the affairs of the republic, tell the United States citizens that they would have to look out for themselves and their property, make no effort to protect the lives and property of foreigners and, in fact, assume an attitude of a strict neutrality, as we have in regard to the warring nations in Europe. In that way we would avoid all responsibility.

But, having due regard for the Monroe doctrine and a sense of responsibility to foreign governments for the protection of their own people and the obligation to protect the citizens of this country, we may have to intervene.

They Will Not Be Peaceable. It has been demonstrated for more than a hundred years that the Mexicans will not be peaceable. It is so easy to raise an army in that country, composed of bandits who live on little or nothing, that any man who can secure a little money can become a general and the head of a revolution. It has been the record of nearly all of the republics of the south that only a strong man or set of men can rule these turbulent people. It looks as if the United States would have to pacify Mexico and maintain a stable government. That will take time and it will cost some money, but it is one of the inevitable consequences of the position which the United States has on the American continent.

Will Renew Fight For Roads.

The different road factions in congress are providing for the last struggle of the Sixty-third congress, for they know that if they do not get their work in early nothing will be done. There are three plans—one known as the Shackleford bill, which appropriates $25,000,000 outright to the various states; the Swanson plan, which appropriates the same amount conditioned upon double appropriations being made by the states before the government money can be expended; then there is the Bryan plan, which provides for issuing $500,000,000 bonds to aid in road construction.

One difficulty the road advocates will encounter is the lack of funds in the treasury as emphasized by the emergency war tax. The war tax is going to be held up as a warning to a number of improvements which will require large appropriations. But this will not stop advocates of the measure, who insist on immediate action.

Voted For Two Goose Yokes.

In the Fifth Maryland district there is always a great contest to secure the negro votes. It is what is known as the Maryland black belt, and there are enough negro voters to decide an election. For some years Sydney E. Mudd carried the district because he knew how to handle that negro vote. When he died a Democrat was elected in his place. But his son, Sydney E. Mudd, seems to have inherited the knack of securing the negro votes.

Now the Mudds, both senior and junior, spelled the first name Sydney with the "y" and thereby hangs a tale. "Make your cross opposite the two goose yokes," were the instructions passed to all the ignorant negroes in the district. Just before going into the booth the negro was told to remember the two goose yokes, and enough seemed to have done so to secure Sydney Mudd a comfortable majority.

Now, a goose yoke is a forked stick and to some extent resembles the letter "Y." It is used by a herder of geese to push the fowls about where they are wanted. The two y's in Sydney Mudd's name afforded an opportunity to tell the negroes to vote for the two goose yokes, which became the campaign cry in the Maryland black belt.

Voted on Lincoln's Nose.

Years ago the negroes of Maryland were instructed to put their cross mark at the end of Lincoln's nose. This was because the picture of Abraham Lincoln was the emblem of the Republican party and that meant a vote for the whole Republican ticket. Every negro was familiar with the picture of Lincoln and that made their instructions easy. After one election day had shown great Republican gains and no great loss on account of imperfect ballots the Democrats turned the Lincoln portrait around, which carried the nose up against the space occupied by their own emblem. Most of the crosses at the end of Lincoln's nose were in the Democratic space, and the negro vote was cast for the Democratic ticket.

"Doctor Camp is dead." When this startling information was passed from mouth to mouth on Sunday the populace could scarcely believe the truth of the statement, and indeed many who heard questioned the next man he met and asked if the statement was true. Doctor Camp was probably as widely known to the citizens of Brainerd and Crow Wing county as any man and the news of his sudden death as he peacefully slept came as a shock, although his intimate acquaintances knew that his health was not of the best. In his death Brainerd loses a valuable citizen, and his friends, who were legion, mourn the loss of one who was always loyal to their interests. A man who never turned a deaf ear to a request from the poor and needy, and who in his professional career responded whenever called regardless of condition and surroundings. Dr. Camp's pleasing smile and interesting personality will be missed in the daily walks of life of his intimate friends, but his memory will last, and his good traits will not soon be forgotten by those with whom he has been associated as citizen, neighbor and companion for a lifetime. Peace be to his ashes.

EDITOR OF "THE HUMP"

T. E. Dahljem, Prominent Member of the Order From Superior, Wis., is in the City

T. E. Dahljem, of Superior, Wis., editor of "The Hump," a weekly devoted to the interests of the Camels of the World, of the Northwest, is in the city today and visiting A. W. Tracy, the organizer at present working on establishing a temple here.

Superior Temple, said Mr. Dahljem, has 619 Camels in its folds and the Duluth Temple is also a large organization. It is expected that when the Brainerd Temple is instituted that large delegations from Superior and Duluth will make the pilgrimage to Brainerd to see that the new lodge gets the proper start.

The Hump periodical is now nine weeks old and has 1,469 paid in advance subscribers and its columns show considerable advertising patronage.

It is mailed to 16 cities in 14 states of the union. Mr. Dahljem says that Mr. Tracy organized the temple in Superior and made of it one of the best fraternal institutions in that city.

To Editor of the Dispatch:

Dear Sir:
It has seemed a pity that in a town the size of Brainerd which does not enjoy many good entertainments two or more should ever occur in the same evening. Especially is this true if there is anything being given which should be of general appeal. Cooperation would conserve its forces along this line and to this end would it not be a feasible plan if there could be kept a calendar of coming events where plans could be recorded and referred to. I desire to commend this to the consideration of the Chamber of Commerce.

Very sincerely,

A SUBSCRIBER.

DEVELOPMENTS OF WEEK ON RANGE

Sinking is in Progress at the No. 2 Shaft of the Cuyuna-Sultana Iron Company

TWO MINES ARE STOCKPILING

Capt. G. A. Anderson, of Rogers, Brown Ore Co., Has Made One of Best Records on Range

Sinking is progressing as usual at shaft No. 2 of the Cuyuna-Sultana Iron company. It is the intention of the company to sink to the 100 foot level and commence drifting from that point. The drifts will run north, west, south and east and three shifts will be employed in the work. The company is, at present, contemplating the improving of the road which runs from the southeast corner of their property to Ironton. When this road is in fair condition, the distance to Ironton will be shortened by one-half. The property will be easily accessible and it will not be necessary to take the Pennington road and cross the Cuyuna-Mille Laes property to reach the mine. This improvement will be appreciated not only by the miners who are employed by the Sultana, but by the public in general who have occasion to visit either one of the last named properties.

It is reported that Dr. Walter Harvey Weed, the well known geologist, will spend three or four days on the Sultana and Cuyuna-Mille Laes properties the coming week. It is hoped that shaft No. 2 will be nicely in the ore body at the time of Dr. Weed's visit.

The Cuyuna-Mille Laes and the Cuyuna-Duluth mines of the American Manganese Manufacturing Co. at Ironton have closed down. E. J. W. Donahue, of the company, says this is but temporary, pending changes in pumpage. The pumps of both mines are continuing to run. At the Cuyuna-Mille Laes mine a 1,600 gallon electric pump is being installed, currently supplied by the Cuyuna Range Power company. The 20,000 tons stockpile at the Cuyuna-Duluth mine has been shipped, also the 23,000 tons stockpile at the Cuyuna-Mille Laes mine. Ironton people believe the mines will start up again in a very short time.

O. J. Wendlandt, president of the Duluth-Brainerd Iron Co., states that a short time option has been made to a strong eastern furnace company, covering a turning of the holdings at profitable prices. Indications were very favorable to making a turn on this deal. A full meeting of stockholders has been called at Duluth, Thursday evening, November 26.

There has been filed the agreement made between the Brainerd-Cuyuna Mining Co. and John O. Martin and Charles C. Jones covering the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 1, township 41, range 31 and the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter, the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter, part of the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section 36, township 45, range 31, whereby the mining company is to pay five cents a ton royalty, half to Martin and half to Jones, on the royalty covering the lease made by the late George W. Holland. This lease provided for 25 cents a ton royalty and the minimum tonnage was to be 5,000 tons for each of the first three years from each forty and 25,000 tons a year from each forty for the balance of the 50 year term. Recently there has been filed the indenture between John O. Martin of Duluth and the Carlson Exploration Co., whereby Martin sells his 2 1/2 cent royalty to the Carlson people. He shall have, however, all royalties due him under the agreement up to and including Sept. 30, 1914.

The Cuyuna range has now but two producing mines, the rest having shut down or being engaged in stripping or sinking operations. The old standbys of the district, the Armour No. 2 of the Rogers, Brown Ore Co. near Crosby, is engaged in stockpiling and is hoisting about 20,000 tons a month. The Kennedy mine of the same company, situated at Cuyuna, is also stockpiling, hoisting about 16,000 tons a month. Capt. G. A. Anderson, of Crosby, is in charge and he has made one of the best mining records of any mining captain on the entire range. It may be truthfully said that without Capt. Anderson there would have been no shaft at the Kennedy mine, the first producer on the range. He combatted quicksand and hundred other discouragements on the new range and attained success with the property.

The Adams mine, underground proposition at the town of Oreland, has closed down for the winter. The Armour No. 1 did not ship this year. They still have a small stockpile at the mine.

The Rowe mine, big pit mine of the Pittsburgh Steel Ore Co. at Riverton, contemplate the erection of a $1,000,000 concentrating plant to wash ores, provided permission can be gained to dam across Rabbit lake near Riverton. The company's shipping ore mined at Riverton to outside concentrators, and, as I understand it, is considering various details preparatory to building a dam for power purposes and erecting a concentrating plant."

The Inland Steel Co. Thompson pit mine is stripping with steam shovels. The Pennington pit mine has closed for the winter.

At the Crow Wing county poor farm the Longyear Exploration company is drilling its eighth hole. Ore was previously found in five of the seven holes put down, the seventh showing up particularly well.

There has been filed an indenture between the C. M. Hill Lumber company, a corporation of Michigan, the Hill Consolidated Mines Co., a corporation of Maine and Peter Drummond of Saginaw, Mich. and B. Magoffin, Jr., of Deerwood. The Thos. Feigh Land company entered into a mining lease with the C. M. Hill Lumber Co. on January 16, 1911, covering the east half of the northeast quarter, the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter and lot 6 in section 9, township 46, range 29. This lease was afterwards modified. Then the Hill Lumber company entered into an agreement with Peter Drummond and B. Magoffin, Jr., agreeing to pay each 2 1/2 cents a ton royalty. The Hill Lumber Co. now leases to the Hill Consolidated Mines Co. for a term commencing Oct. 8, 1914, and expiring January 1, 1961, at 45 cents a ton. The royalty is distributed as follows: Fee owners 35 cents a ton, Drummond 2 1/2 cents, Magoffin 2 1/2 cents, Hill Lumber Co. 5 cents. There shall be mined and shipped not less than 25,000 tons a year.

A shaft agreement has been filed, the parties to the agreement being Hains Anderson and wife, the original fee owners; R. C. Jamison, Albert F. Gross, Edmund F. Gross, D. C. Peacock, John D. Will Renew Fight For Roads.

The different road factions in congress are providing for the last struggle of the Sixty-third congress, for they know that if they do not get their work in early nothing will be done. There are three plans—one known as the Shackleford bill, which appropriates $25,000,000 outright to the various states; the Swanson plan, which appropriates the same amount conditioned upon double appropriations being made by the states before the government money can be expended; then there is the Bryan plan, which provides for issuing $500,000,000 bonds to aid in road construction.

One difficulty the road advocates will encounter is the lack of funds in the treasury as emphasized by the emergency war tax. The war tax is going to be held up as a warning to a number of improvements which will require large appropriations. But this will not stop advocates of the measure, who insist on immediate action.

Voted For Two Goose Yokes.

In the Fifth Maryland district there is always a great contest to secure the negro votes. It is what is known as the Maryland black belt, and there are enough negro voters to decide an election. For some years Sydney E. Mudd carried the district because he knew how to handle that negro vote. When he died a Democrat was elected in his place. But his son, Sydney E. Mudd, seems to have inherited the knack of securing the negro votes.

Now the Mudds, both senior and junior, spelled the first name Sydney with the "y" and thereby hangs a tale. "Make your cross opposite the two goose yokes," were the instructions passed to all the ignorant negroes in the district. Just before going into the booth the negro was told to remember the two goose yokes, and enough seemed to have done so to secure Sydney Mudd a comfortable majority.

Now, a goose yoke is a forked stick and to some extent resembles the letter "Y." It is used by a herder of geese to push the fowls about where they are wanted. The two y's in Sydney Mudd's name afforded an opportunity to tell the negroes to vote for the two goose yokes, which became the campaign cry in the Maryland black belt.

Voted on Lincoln's Nose.

Years ago the negroes of Maryland were instructed to put their cross mark at the end of Lincoln's nose. This was because the picture of Abraham Lincoln was the emblem of the Republican party and that meant a vote for the whole Republican ticket. Every negro was familiar with the picture of Lincoln and that made their instructions easy. After one election day had shown great Republican gains and no great loss on account of imperfect ballots the Democrats turned the Lincoln portrait around, which carried the nose up against the space occupied by their own emblem. Most of the crosses at the end of Lincoln's nose were in the Democratic space, and the negro vote was cast for the Democratic ticket.

DR. J. L. CAMP IS SUMMONED

Well Known Physician and Surgeon
Died of Heart Failure in the Early Sunday Morning Hours

NESTOR OF SURGEONS HERE

Member of Advisory Board of Sanatorium at Walker—Planning Hospital for County

In the early morning hours of Sunday, Dr. James L. Camp, one of the most prominent physicians and surgeons of the Northwest, was called to the great beyond. Heart failure claimed him as he lay in his bed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Peabody, 214 North Seventh street, where he had roomed for years.

Mr. Peabody said he found the body at 12:30 Sunday afternoon. He believed the doctor had died some time in the night. He was at his door at 9 in the morning to ask if he wanted breakfast, but there had been no answer to his question, and believing he wanted to rest longer, Mr. Peabody did not disturb him. The doctor retired at about 10:10 Saturday evening. Shortly after something appeared to worry Dr. Camp and he knocked at Mr. Peabody's door and the latter then went to his room and together they talked about various things from 10:10 to 11 in the evening.

Dr. Camp had not complained of being sick. He had been up and around Friday and Saturday. On Saturday evening he had eaten a particularly hearty supper at the Peabody home.

He had made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Peabody the past five years and at intervals before that had roomed and boarded there. He anticipated no illness or trouble, for but a few days ago Mr. and Mrs. Peabody invited him to spend Thanksgiving with them, and the doctor said he had a fine turkey at his farm which would make a good dinner for them.

Dr. Camp was born December 8, 1855, in Dixon, Illinois. His father died at about the same age, 59, and also passed away near Thanksgiving, being seated in church. Surviving the doctor are his sister, Mrs. Irma Camp Hartley, county superintendent of schools, and a brother, Fred Camp, of Durango, Col.

The ancestors of Dr. Camp were among the early settlers of Massachusetts and New York. He was educated at the Dixon public schools, Knox Academy, Galesburg, Ill., Cornell University, New York, and Rush Medical College, Chicago, Ill.

He began practice at Dixon, Ill. Later he was Indian physician at Standing Rock agency in the years 1882 and 1883.

"He came to Brainerd in the spring of 1883 for a time practiced alone and later at various times was associated with Dr. Parson and Dr. McPherson. Then a firm, Camp & Thabes, was formed, which later became Camp, Thabes & Berg.

In the early days of Brainerd Dr. Camp conducted the Lumberman's hospital which later became St. Joseph's hospital. He established a great reputation as a surgeon, one of the best in the Northwest. Occasionally people would go to St. Paul and Rochester for operations, and invariably surgeons there would ask the patient if he had seen Dr. Camp. If Dr. Camp had expressed an adverse opinion regarding operating, surgeons from other sections of the country usually considered such diagnosis as final. Dr. Camp was of the school of surgeons who never advised operating unless it was absolutely necessary.

He was instrumental in bringing the state sanatorium to Walker and was a member of the advisory board of that institution. Lately he had been working on plans for a county sanatorium, such as the county commissioners recently took action on, appropriating $7,000 this summer.

In fraternal and public matters the doctor took a prominent part. He was a member of the Zeta Psi Fraternity, Elks, A. O. U. W., and the Brainerd Chamber of Commerce. He was particularly aggressive in working for better railway facilities for Brainerd and the district.

Deeply interested in farming, he had a fine place of 1,700 acres known as the Mission farm and on its broad acres a prize winning herd of Holsteins roamed. For years he supplied the sanatorium with milk. The farm was also drilled for iron and good prospects are reported to have been found.

He was one of the best doctors, a friend to the poor. Many times he never made entry of a call, aware that the family was sorely pressed for funds. "If you can pay me a little, why do it," he used to say. "If you can't pay, then we shall make no mention of it."

No funeral announcement will be made until the brother, Fred Camp, of Durango, Col., can be communicated with. The body will remain at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Peabody, 214 North Seventh street, where friends may view the remains.

It is announced that the funeral services will be conducted by Rev. G. P. Sheridan, assisted by Rev. W. J. Lowrie.

OLDER BOYS' CONFERENCE

Crow Wing County Organization to Meet Friday at Seventh Street
Norwegian Lutheran Church

DR. R. W. BOWDEN TO SPEAK

Program Includes, Music, Papers by
Boys, Athletic Entertainment
and Banquet

The Crow Wing County Older Boys' conference will be held at the Seventh Street Lutheran church on Friday, November 27. About one hundred boys are expected to be present, the ages ranging from 15 to 20. Delegates from some seventeen schools about the county, Deerwood, Crosby, Pequot, Ft. Ripley, etc., are expected to come.

Dr. R. W. Bowden, secondary division superintendent for the Minnesota Sunday School association, will speak both morning and evening. The morning program consists mostly of music, papers read by boys on vital topics in Sunday school work, and a conference hour led by Dr. R. W. Bowden. This morning session is open to the public. Each boy, upon entering in the morning, is met by the registration committee who, for the small price of ten cents, plus on his coat a badge which he is expected to wear the rest of the day, and which admits him to the banquet in the evening.

The afternoon consists in sports at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, and free baths for all boys at the "Y."

As a fitting windup to this day of activity, comes a big banquet in the evening at 6:30, limited strictly to those who have registered. After the bountiful supper has been disposed of, and the plates have been removed, a rare treat lies in wait for the boys. Dr. R. W. Bowden delivers an interesting address; the subject will be announced later. The conference will close with the "Circle of Brotherhood" and prayer, and each fellow faces homeward, eyes glistening and more determined than ever to be of service.

This conference is in the department of George Tracy, secretary division superintendents of Crow Wing county, and he deserves much credit for promoting this affair. He is ably assisted by the officers of the Boys' Conference, and the various committees, program, banquet, athletics, entertainment and registration. The printing of programs is also done by a boy, Howard Houghton.

A list of committees, also the program in full, will be printed in the Dispatch before the conference takes place.

All food for the banquet has been kindly furnished by the ladies of the various churches who will also serve it. This is a fine example of the cooperation that exists among our churches to promote a good cause.

Special Notice

At a special meeting of the board of deacons held last evening it was decided not to hold the mid-week service on Wednesday of this week as heretofore announced.

MAIL YOUR PARCELS EARLY

Uncle Sam Wishes the People to Cooperate With His Postmasters in Handling the Mail

The establishment of the parcel post has given a wonderful impetus to the use of the mails as a means of distributing Christmas gifts, and in view of the increased weight limit, reduced postal rates and other extensions of the service during the past year, it is anticipated that the amount of mail during the approaching holiday season will exceed all previous records. In order that the Christmas mail be handled promptly and satisfactorily, it is essential that the public cooperate with the postal service to the fullest extent. The post-office department has issued the usual instructions to postoffices throughout the country for the guidance of the postmasters in matters pertaining to Christmas mail, and Postmaster Dunn tells the Dispatch that if the general public will follow the following rules they will have little if any difficulty and the careful observance of senders of gifts through the mail is requested.

Prepay postage fully on all parcels. Address parcels fully and plainly. Place name and address of sender on all matter.

Pack articles carefully and wrap them securely, but do not seal them, as sealed parcels are subject to postage at the letter rate.

Mail parcels early; they may be marked "Do not open until Christmas."

Insure valuable parcels, fee 5 or 10 cents.

Written inscriptions such as "Merry Christmas," "Happy New Year," "With Best Wishes," and numbers, names or letters for purpose of description, are permissible additions to fourth-class (parcel post) mail. Books may bear simply dedicatory inscriptions not of a personal nature. Other written additions subject to parcel to letter postage. Communications prepaid at first-class rates may be sent with parcels prepaid at fourth class rate provided they are securely attached to outside of parcels.

LOSS TO THE SCHOOL FUND

Failure to Carry the Third Amendment May Result in Loss to
State of 500,000 Acres Land

WAS A SERIOUS BLOW TO STATE

This Important Matter Will be
Threshed Out at N. M. D. A. Meeting in Brainerd in Dec.

An important matters which will undoubtedly be threshed out by delegates to the Brainerd convention of the Northern Minnesota Development association, December 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th, is the needs for a state constitutional amendment. The failure of the electors to ratify the third amendment was a serious blow to development of state lands, and a corresponding loss to the school fund of the state, which would have been the beneficiary. Then again the loss of this amendment may result in the loss to the state of about 500,000 acres of land still to be patented, although Governor Eberhart called attention to the needs of this amendment, the press and voters denied it the support it deserved.

BELTRAMI WILL SEND DELEGATES

Large Delegation of Representative
Men From Bemidji and Beltrami
County Will Come

GETTING THINGS IN READINESS

All Sections of Northern Minnesota
are Preparing to be Represented
at Brainerd Meeting

The Bemidji Pioneer says: Bemidji and Beltrami county are to be well represented at the convention of the Northern Minnesota Development association which is to be held in Brainerd, December 1, 2, 3 and 4. A large number of Bemidji men have announced their intention to go and Baudette, Spooner, Blackduck and other Beltrami county towns are to send delegates, the plan being to make the delegation from here one of the largest and most enthusiastic to attend the convention, which will without doubt be the most important held by the association since it was first given life here five years ago.

As the birthplace of the booster league it is only proper that Bemidji should have a large delegation at the convention. But that is not the only reason.

Bemidji's growth waits very largely upon the settlement and development of northern Minnesota, therefore as northern Minnesota grows Bemidji must grow. Should the growth of northern Minnesota halt, it would be only natural for Bemidji progress to halt. To boost and assist the efforts of the Northern Minnesota Development association means to aid the advancement of Bemidji and Beltrami county.

Among those who will endeavor to attend the convention are the following: A. G. Wedge, vice president of the First National bank; W. L. Brooks, cashier of the Northern National bank; F. S. Lyman, a member of the state efficiency commission, and proprietor of the Markham hotel; H. H. Mayer, secretary of the Bemidji Commercial club; E. B. Berman, of the Berman Real Estate and Insurance agency; Thomas S. Ervin, of the Beltrami Elevator & Milling company; E. H. Winter or Harry Reynolds, of the Reynolds & Winter Land company; C. C. Cross, real estate man; J. J. Opsahl, and others.

U. C. T. INITIATION

Four Candidates from Little Falls
Join the United Commercial
Travelers Organization

Saturday evening, November 21, was a gala night in the history of Brainerd Council, No. 545, of the United Commercial Travelers of America. Four candidates from Little Falls were initiated and a transfer received from Fort Dodge, Iowa.

In the class were George Kiewel and Frank Kiewel of the Kiewel Brewing Co., Edward Berg of the Tanner flour mills and H. V. Venners, wholesale cigar manufacturer, all of Little Falls, and George Ryan, of Brainerd, traveling for the Armour company.

After the initiatory ceremonies, which included everything due the initiates, a fine banquet was served, provided by Mrs. Charles Beugnot and Mrs. Louis Sandberg. Addresses were made by the new members, and they were some talks too, because every drummer can talk. All he needs is the opportunity.

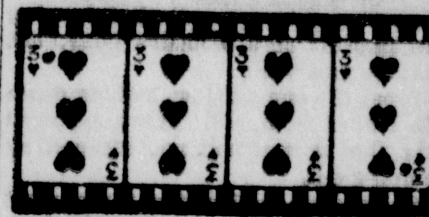

The entertainment committee will soon announce a series of entertainments for the winter months. The attendance at the meeting was good, the letters sent out by Senior Counselor Paul G. Clarkson having the desired effect in stimulating attendance.

The universal opinion of those who attended this popular theatre last night was a very flattering one for which the management is very grateful. "Mareca, the Foster Mother," came in for nearly all the praise. Tomorrow is the big day at the Columbia for Alice Joyce comes in "The Mystery of the Sleeping Death." Three acts of vaudeville has also been engaged among them "Cyrus Apple Dumpling," the famous clog and buck and wing dancer from Arklin.

At the Park Theatre

When Miss Annette Kellerman last appeared at the London Hippodrome, her grace and charm and accomplishments led the alert London representative of an American film company to approach her with a suggestion regarding starring on Broadway. The result of his suggestion was witnessed this season at the Globe theatre, New York, when Miss Kellerman with "Neptune's Daughter" as her vehicle, created new records for Broadway motion picture productions. Blass playgoers were electrified, jaded critics rubbed their eyes and wondered, rival film producers gnashed their teeth. "Neptune's Daughter" made Broadway sit up and take notice, just as it will delight Brainerd audiences when this famous photoplay production is seen at the Park theatre where it will be exhibited for one day only, Thanksgiving, matinee and night.

Miss Kellerman is sans doute the world's greatest woman, natatorial expert, her swimming and diving have charmed millions in every quarter of the civilized globe, and her superb figure and unequalled histrionic talent, make for the unqualified success of the delightful aquatic fairylike spectacle, "Neptune's Daughter," the story of which is woven around the mythological sea-god and his home beneath the green waters of the ocean. Entertaining to man, woman and child, in equal degree, "Neptune's Daughter" should have a record breaking attendance at the Park theatre on Nov. 26th.

Program Includes, Music, Papers by
Boys, Athletic Entertainment
and Banquet

The Crow Wing County Older Boys' conference will be held at the Seventh Street Lutheran church on Friday, November 27. About one hundred boys are expected to be present, the ages ranging from 15 to 20. Delegates from some seventeen schools about the county, Deerwood, Crosby, Pequot, Ft. Ripley, etc., are expected to come.

Dr. R. W. Bowden, secondary division superintendent for the Minnesota Sunday School association will speak both morning and evening. The morning program consists mostly of music, papers read by boys on vital topics in Sunday school work, and a conference hour led by Dr. R. W. Bowden. This morning session is open to the public. Each boy, upon entering in the morning, is met by the registration committee who, for the small price of ten cents, pins on his coat a badge which he is expected to wear the rest of the day, and which admits him to the banquet in the evening.

The afternoon consists in sports at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, and free baths for all boys at the "Y."

As a fitting windup to this day of activity, comes a big banquet in the evening at 6:30, limited strictly to those who have registered. After the bountiful supper has been disposed of, and the plates have been removed, a rare treat lies in wait for the boys. Dr. R. W. Bowden delivers an interesting address; the subject will be announced later. The conference will close with the "Circle of Brotherhood" and prayer, and each fellow faces homeward, eyes glistening and more determined than ever to be of service.

This conference is in the department of George Tracy, secretary division superintendents of Crow Wing county, and he deserves much credit for promoting this affair. He is ably assisted by the officers of the Boys' Conference, and the various committees, program, banquet, athletics, entertainment and registration. The printing of programs is also done by the boys, Howard Houghton.

A list of committees, also the program in full, will be printed in the Dispatch before the conference takes place.

All food for the banquet has been kindly furnished by the ladies of the various churches who will also serve it. This is a fine example of the cooperation that exists among our churches to promote a good cause.

Special Notice

At a special meeting of the board of deacons held last evening it was decided not to hold the mid-week service on Wednesday of this week as heretofore announced.

A united Thanksgiving service is to be held on Thanksgiving evening in the German Evangelical church in Northeast Brainerd to which the congregation is cordially invited.

The Christmas Rush in Parcel Post
Department of Country Expected

MAIL YOUR PARCELS EARLY

Uncle Sam Wishes the People to Co-operate With His Postmasters in Handling the Mail

The establishment of the parcel post has given a wonderful impetus to the use of the mails as a means of distributing Christmas gifts, and in view of the increased weight limit, reduced postal rates and other extensions of the service during the past year, it is anticipated that the amount of mail during the approaching holiday season will exceed all previous records. In order that the Christmas mail be handled promptly and satisfactorily, it is essential that the public cooperate with the postal service to the fullest extent. The post-office department has issued the usual instructions to postoffices throughout the country for the guidance of the postmasters in matters pertaining to Christmas mail, and Postmaster Dunn tells the Dispatch that if the general public will follow the following rules they will have little if any difficulty and the careful observance of senders of gifts through the mail is requested. Prepay postage fully on all parcels. Address parcels fully and plainly. Place name and address of sender on all matter.

Back articles carefully and wrap them securely, but do not seal them, as sealed parcels are subject to postage at the letter rate.

Mail parcels early; they may be marked "Do not open until Christmas."

Insure valuable parcels, fee 5 or 10 cents.

Written inscriptions such as "Merry Christmas," "Happy New Year," "With Best Wishes," and numbers, names or letters for purpose of description, are permissible additions to fourth-class (parcel post) mail. Books may bear simply dedicatory inscriptions not of a personal nature. Other written additions subject to parcel to letter postage. Communications prepaid at first-class rates may be sent with parcels prepaid at fourth class rate provided they are securely attached to outside of parcels.

LOSS TO THE SCHOOL FUND

Failure to Carry the Third Amendment May Result in Loss to
State of 500,000 Acres Land

WAS A SERIOUS BLOW TO STATE

This Important Matter Will be
Threshed Out at N. M. D. A. Meeting in Brainerd in Dec.

An important matters which will undoubtedly be threshed out by delegates to the Brainerd convention of the Northern Minnesota Development association, December 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th, is the needs for a state constitutional amendment. The failure of the electors to ratify the third amendment was a serious blow to the development of state lands, and a corresponding loss to the school fund of the state, which would have been the beneficiary. Then again the loss of this amendment may result in the loss to the state of about 500,000 acres of land still to be patented, although Governor Dierhart called attention to the needs of this amendment, the press and voters denied it the support it deserved.

BELTRAMI WILL SEND DELEGATES

Large Delegation of Representative
Men From Bemidji and Beltrami
County Will Come

GETTING THINGS IN READINESS

All Sections of Northern Minnesota
are Preparing to be Represented
at Brainerd Meeting

The Bemidji Pioneer says: Bemidji and Beltrami county are to be well represented at the convention of the Northern Minnesota Development association which is to be held in Brainerd, December 1, 2, 3 and 4. A large number of Bemidji men have announced their intention to go and Bandette, Spooner, Blackduck and other Beltrami county towns are to send delegates, the plan being to make the delegation from here one of the largest and most enthusiastic to attend the convention, which will without doubt be the most important held by the association since it was first given life here five years ago.

As the birthplace of the booster league it is only proper that Bemidji should have a large delegation at the convention. But that is not the only reason.

Bemidji's growth waits very largely upon the settlement and development of northern Minnesota, therefore as northern Minnesota grows Bemidji must grow. Should the growth of northern Minnesota halt, it would be only natural for Bemidji progress to halt. To boost and assist the efforts of the Northern Minnesota Development association means to aid the advancement of Bemidji and Beltrami county.

Among those who will endeavor to attend the convention are the following: A. G. Wedge, vice president of the First National bank; W. L. Brooks, cashier of the Northern National bank; F. S. Lyon, a member of the state efficiency commission, and proprietor of the Markham hotel; H. H. Mayer, secretary of the Bemidji Commercial club; E. B. Berman, of the Berman Real Estate and Insurance agency; Thomas S. Ervin, of the Beltrami Elevator & Milling company; E. H. Winter or Harry Reynolds, of the Reynolds & Winter Land company; C. C. Cross, real estate man; J. J. Opsahl, and others.

U. C. T. INITIATION

Four Candidates from Little Falls
Join the United Commercial
Travelers Organization

Saturday evening, November 21, was a gala night in the history of Brainerd Council, No. 545, of the United Commercial Travelers of America. Four candidates from Little Falls were initiated and a transfer received from Fort Dodge, Iowa.

In the class were George Kiewel and Frank Kiewel of the Kiewel Brewing Co., Edward Berg of the Tanner flour mills and H. V. Venner, wholesale cigar manufacturer, all of Little Falls, and George Ryan, of Brainerd, traveling for the Armour company.

After the initiatory ceremonies, which included everything due the initiates, a fine banquet was served, provided by Mrs. Charles Beugnot and Mrs. Louis Sandberg. Addresses were made by the new members, and they were some talks too, because every drummer can talk. All he needs is the opportunity.

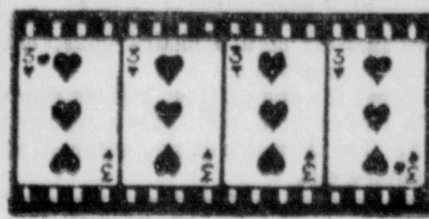

The entertainment committee will soon announce a series of entertainments for the winter months. The attendance at the meeting was good, the letters sent out by Senior Counsellor Paul G. Clarkson having the desired effect in stimulating attendance.

Los Angeles gave itself up, hook, line and sinker, to the making of this picture. At the request of the Chamber of Commerce two thousand of the residents of the city appeared in the film, besides the principals. Four companies of the Los Angeles Fire Department, a police captain and fourteen regular policemen, all engaged in a big scene in the busiest part of the business part of the city, and all the city officials gave all the assistance in their power to make the film as realistic as possible.

The universal opinion of those who attended this popular theatre last night was a very flattering one for which the management is very grateful. "Mareca, the Foster Mother," came in for nearly all the praise. Tomorrow is the big day at the Columbia for Alice Joyce comes in "The Mystery of the Sleeping Death." Three acts of vaudeville has also been engaged among them "Cyrus Apple Dumpling," the famous clog and buck and wing dancer from Arklin.

At the Park Theatre

When Miss Annette Kellerman last appeared at the London Hippodrome, her grace and charm and accomplishments led the alert London representative of an American film company to approach her with a suggestion regarding starring on Broadway. The result of his suggestion was witnessed this season at the Globe theatre, New York, when Miss Kellerman with "Neptune's Daughter" as her vehicle, created new records for Broadway motion picture productions. Basso players were electrified, jaded critics rubbed their eyes and wondered, rival film producers gnashed their teeth. "Neptune's Daughter" made Broadway sit up and take notice, just as it will delight Brainerd audiences when this famous photoplay production is seen at the Park theatre where it will be exhibited for one day only, Thanksgiving, matinee and night.

Miss Kellerman is sans doute the world's greatest woman, natatorial expert, her swimming and diving have charmed millions in every quarter of the civilized globe, and her superb figure and unequalled histrionic talent, make for the unequalled success of the delightful aquatic fairylike spectacle, "Neptune's Daughter," the story of which is woven around the mythological sea-god and his home beneath the green waters of the ocean. Entertaining to man, woman and child, in equal degree, "Neptune's Daughter" should have a record breaking attendance at the Park theatre on Nov. 26th.

TURKEY BECOMING EXTINCT.

We'll Have to Find Another Center-piece For Thanksgiving Dinners.

It is a sad fact to state, but if the truth must be told it looks very much as if the great American turkey, the center of our Thanksgiving festivities, will after not many years become as extinct as the auk, says the Washington Star. According to the census in 1890 the number of turkeys that year was 12,000,000. The population at that time was at least a dozen million less than it is now. But the last census returns place the turkeys at only 3,688,708, their valuation being $6,005,818.

Hence it is easily seen that, while the turkey eating population is increasing by the hundreds of thousands, the fowls themselves are decreasing at an even greater rate. We have a nation of 90,000,000 people and only 3,000,000 turkeys.

Turkeys are very delicate birds, and in spite of their huge size they cannot stand the hardships that chickens can easily endure. By nature wild, they pine and die in confinement, yet if left to wander too young are killed by wet grass and vermin. They do not like to roost in a house like chickens, but prefer to sit in rows on the boughs of tall trees. Even in storms and blizzards they sit calmly as druids perched high on the swaying limbs and seemingly heedless of rain or cold. But put them in a warm house or in a cramped yard and they do not thrive. So the difficulty of raising them has been a large factor in the high price of their meat and their growing scarcity.

Closed and locked doors confronted them; and their summons elicited no response; while the first door, when broken in by a whole-souled kick, discovered nothing more satisfactory than an empty room, its bed bearing the imprint of a woman's body, but that woman gone.

From the one window, looking down the side of the house, Texas announced that the woman had not escaped by jumping out.

So it seemed that the three must have had warning of their arrival, after all; and presumably were now herded together in the adjoining room, which looked out over the veranda roof, waiting in fear and trembling for the assault that must soon come—and in fact immediately did.

But it met with more stubborn resistance than had been anticipated. The door had been barricaded from within—re-enforced by furniture placed against it. Four minutes and the united efforts of four men (including the bleary loafer of the barroom) were required to overcome its inert resistance. But even when it was down, the room was found to be as empty as the first.

Only the fingers of two hands gripping the edge of the veranda roof showed the way the fugitives had flown; and these vanished instantly as the room was invaded.

Followed a swift rush of hoofs down the dusty street, and a chorus of blasphemy in the hotel hallway; for Judith had headed the concerted rush for the staircase and contrived to block it for a full half minute by pretending to stumble and twist her ankle.

In spite of that alleged injury, she never limped, and wasn't a yard behind the first who broke from the hotel to the open, nor yet appreciably behind him in vaulting to saddle.

Well up the road a cloud of smoky dust half obscured the shapes of three who rode for their very lives. The pursuit was off in a twinkling and well bunched—Marrophat's mount leading by a nose, Judith second, Hopi Jim and Texas but little in the rear. And in the first rush they seemed to gain; moment by moment they drew up on the flying cloud of dust.

Judith heard an oath muttered beside her and saw Marrophat jerking a revolver from his holster. The weapon swept up and to a level; but as the hammer fell, Judith's horse came heavily against the other, swinging it half a dozen feet aside, and deflecting the bullet hopelessly.

The shock of collision was so great that Marrophat kept his seat with difficulty. He turned toward Judith a face livid with rage.

Simultaneously, as if taking the shot as the signal for a fusillade, Judith saw Alan lean back over his horse's rump and open fire.

An instant later his companion, Barcus, imitated his example.

In immediate consequence, Texas dropped reins, slumped forward over the pommel, wobbled weakly in his saddle for a moment, then losing the stirrups, pitched headlong to the ground; while Hopi Jim's horse stopped short, precipitating his rider overhead, and dropped dead.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.The Upper Trail.

In the ten minutes' delay necessitated by this reverse, a number of more or less innocent bystanders picked up the man Texas and carried him off to breathe his last beneath a roof; Hopi Jim picked himself up, brushed his person tolerably clear of clouds of dust and profanity, and departed in search of a mount to replace the horse that had been shot under him; and Judith sat her horse calmly, smiling sweet insolence into the exasperated countenance of Marrophat.

Incidentally the fugitives disappeared round a bend in the road that led directly into the wild and barren heart of the Painted Hills.

In the brief interval that elapsed before his return with Hopi Jim, Marrophat contrived to persuade the bandit that Judith had been, at least indirectly, responsible for the catastrophe, with the upshot that, temporarily blinded by her fascinations by the glitter of nineteen thousand dollars in the near distance, Mr. Slade maintained his distance and a deaf ear to her blandishments. The only information as to their purpose that she was able to extract from either man, when the pursuing party turned aside from the main trail, some distance from Mesa, was that Hopi Jim knew a short cut through the range, via what he termed the upper trail, by which they hoped to be able to head the fugitives off before they could gain the desert on the far side of the hills.

Only at long intervals did they draw rein to permit Hopi Jim to make reconnaissance of the lower trail that threaded the valley on the far side of the ridge.

Toward noon he returned in haste from the last of these surveys—scrambling recklessly down the mountain-side and throwing himself upon his hands with the advice:

"We've headed 'em—can make it now if we ride like all get-out!"

For half an hour more they pushed on at the best speed to be obtained from their weary animals, at length drawing rein at a point where the trail crossed the ridge and widened out upon a long, broad ledge that overhung the valley of the lower trail, with a clear drop to the latter from the brink of a good two hundred feet.

One hasty look back and down into the valley evoked a grunt of satisfaction from Hopi Jim.

"Just in time," he asseverated. "Here they come! Ten minutes more . . ."

His smile answered Marrophat's with unpeppable cruel significance.

"Texas will sleep better tonight when he knows how I've squared the deal for him!" the bandit declared.

"What are you going to do?" Judith demanded, reining her horse in beside Marrophat as the latter dismounted.

A gesture drew her attention to a huge boulder poised insecurely on the very lip of the chasm.

"We're going to tip that over on your friends, Miss Judith!" Marrophat replied, with a smack of relish in his voice. "Simple—neat—efficient—eh? What more can you ask?"

She answered only with an irrepressible gesture of horror. Marrophat's laugh followed her as she turned away.

For some moments she strained her vision vainly, endeavoring to penetrate the turbulent currents of superheated air that filled the valley. Then she made out indistinctly the faintly marked line of the lower trail; and immediately she caught a glimpse of three small figures, mounted, toiling painfully toward the point where death awaited them like a bolt from the blue.

Hastily she glanced over-shoulder: Hopi Jim and Marrophat, ignoring her, were straining themselves against the boulder without budging it an inch, for all its apparent nicety of poise. For an instant a wild hope flashed through her mind, but it was immediately exorcised when Hopi Jim stepped back and uttered a few words of which only two—"dynamite" and "fuse"—reached her ears.

Kneeling beside the boulder he dug busily for an instant, then lodged the stick to his satisfaction, attached the fuse, and breaking off, edged on his belly to the edge of the cliff and looked down, carefully calculating the length of the fuse by the distance of the party down below from the spot where the rock must fall.

But while he was so engaged and Marrophat aided him, all eager interest, Judith was taking advantage of their disregard of her.

Hurriedly unbuckling her jacket, she whipped a playing card from her pocket, a trey o' hearts, and with the stub of a pencil scribbled three words on its face—"Danger! Go back!"

Then finding a small, flatish bit of rock, she bound the card to it with a bit of string; and with one more backward glance to make sure she was not watched, approached the brink.

Hopi Jim was meticulously shortening the fuse, Marrophat kneeling by his side.

In the canyon below the three were within two minutes of the danger point.

It was no trick at all to drop the stone so that it fell within a dozen feet of the leading horseman.

She saw him rein in suddenly, dismount, cast a look aloft, then dismount and pick up the warning.

As the others joined him, he detached the card and showed it to them. At the same time Hopi Jim and Marrophat jumped up and ran back, each seizing and holding his horse by nose and bridle.

Constrained to do likewise lest she lose her mount, Judith waited with a lightened heart.

The explosion smote dull echoes from the flanks of the Painted Hills all drowsing in the noon-day hush: the boulder teetered reluctantly on the brink, then disappeared with a tearing sound followed by a rush of earth and gravel; a wide gap appeared in the brink of the trail.

Leaving Marrophat to hold the two frightened horses while the girl soothed her own, the bandit rushed to the edge, threw himself flat and swore bitterly, with an accent of grievance, as he rose.

From the canyon below a dull noise of galloping hoofs advertised too plainly the failure of their attempt.

And Hopi Jim turned back only to find Judith mounted, reining her horse in between him and Marrophat, and prepared to give emphasis to what she had said with an automatic pistol that nestled snugly in her palm.

"One moment, Mr. Slade," she suggested evenly. "Just a moment before you break the sad news to Mr. Marrophat, I've something to say that needs your attention—likewise, your respect. It is this: I am parting company with you and Mr. Marrophat. I am riding on toward the west, by this trail. If either of you care to follow me—the automatic flashed ominously in the sun glare—"It will be with full knowledge of the consequences. Mr. Marrophat will enlighten you if you have any doubt of my ability to take care of myself in such affairs as this. If you are well advised, you will turn back and report failure to my father."

She nodded curtly and swung her horse round.

"And what shall I tell your father from you?" Marrophat demanded sharply.

"What you please," the girl replied, flashing an impish smile over-shoulder. "But, since when I part company with you, I part with him as well—for all of me, you may tell him to go to the devil!"

"Well," Mr. Marrophat admitted confidentially to Mr. Slade, "I'm damned!"

"And that ain't all," Mr. Slade confided in Mr. Marrophat, whipping out his own revolver: "You're being held up, too. I'll take those guns of your'n, friend, and what else you've got about you that's of value, including your horse—and when you get back to old man Trine you can just tell him, with my best compliments, that I've quit the job and lit out after that daughter of his'n. She's a heap sight more attractive than nineteen thousand dollars, and not half so hard to earn!"

CHAPTER XXXIV.Burnt Fingers.

Once she had lost touch with her father's creatures, the girl drew rein and went on more slowly and cautiously.

Below her, in the valley, the lower trail wound its facile way. From time to time she could discern upon some naked stretch of its length a cloud of dust, or perhaps three mounted figures, scurrying madly on with fear of death snapping at their heels.

It was within an hour of midnight, a night bell-clear and bitter cold on the heights, and bright with moonlight, when Alan's party made its last pause and camped to rest against the dawn, unconscious of the fact that, a quarter of a mile above them, on the upper trail, a lonely woman paused when they paused and made her own camp on the edge of a sharp declivity.

The level shafts of the rising sun awakened her. She sat up, rubbed her eyes, yawned, stretched limbs stiff with the hardship of sleeping on unyielding, sun-baked earth—and of a sudden started up, surprised by the grating of footsteps on the earth behind her.

Before she could turn, however, she was caught and wrapped in the arms of Hopi Jim.

She mustered all her strength and wits and will for one last struggle—and in a frenzied moment managed to break his hold a trifle, enough to enable her to snatch at the pistol hanging from her belt and present it at his head.

But it exploded harmlessly, spending its bullet on the blue of the morning sky. The bandit caught her wrist in time, thrust it aside and subjected it to such cruel pressure and such savage wrenchings that the pistol dropped from fingers numbed with pain.

And now all hint of mercy left his eyes; remained only the glare of rage. He put forth all his strength in turn, and Judith was as a child in his hands. In half a minute he had her helpless, in as much time more her back was breaking across his knee, while he bound her with loop after loop of his rawhide lariat.

Then, leaving her momentarily supine on the ground, Hopi Jim caught and unhobbled her horse, and without troubling to saddle it, lifted the girl to its back, and placed her there, face upward, catching her hands and feet, as they fell on either flank of the animal, with more loops of that unbreakable rawhide, and deftly placing the master knot of the hitch that bound this human pack well beyond possibility of her reach.

She panted a prayer for mercy. He laughed in her face, bent and kissed her brutally, and stepped back laughing to admire his handiwork.

Thus he stood for an instant between the horse and the edge of the declivity, a fair mark, stark against the sky, for one who stood in the valley below, holding his rifle with eager fingers, waiting for just such opportunity with the same impatience with which he had waited for it ever since the noise of debris kicked over the edge by the struggling man and woman had drawn his attention to what was going on above.

Alan pressed the trigger and the shot sounded clear in the morning stillness, Judith saw a look of aggrieved amazement cross the face of Hopi Jim Slade.

Then he threw his hands out, clawed blindly at the air, staggered, reeled against the horse's flank so heavily that it shied in fright, and abruptly shot from sight over the edge of the bluff.

Time in Building.

The use of lime as binding material for mortar originated in the remote past. It is probable that some savages when using limestone rocks to confine their fire noticed that the stones were changed by the action of the heat. A passing shower may have shaken the lime to a paste, and they discovered that the paste was smooth and sticky and was a better material than clay to fill the crevices in their crude dwellings. From this discovery it was but a step to add sand to the paste in order to produce a mortar.

At Night Resembles City of the Dead.

READY FOR AIR INVADERS.

Searchlights Scour Sky and Maxims Perched on Many High Buildings Await Foe—Visitors Shudder and Imagine Uncanny Things Until They Become Accustomed to Gloom.

The average Londoner has changed. He has cast off his cloak of indifference and now become an interested spectator of the activities around him. A battery of artillery rattles through the streets and he pauses to gaze in wonder at those harmless looking steel tubes that will soon be hurling death and destruction at the enemy.

During the day his thoughts dwell with the allies, picturing them in a superhuman struggle as best he can from the scary reports of the newspapers. But at night he turns his attention to the skies and thinks of Zeppelins. "Will they attack us tonight?" is his constant question.

In any event London is fully prepared to meet such a formidable foe as the Zeppelin, for searchlights scour the sky for them at night, and Maxim guns are perched on many high buildings waiting, ever ready to spit forth their deadly missiles and bring the aircraft down into the busy streets.

To a stranger London would appear as a city of the dead, for the first thing that strikes one is the absence of light. During the day everything is normal, but at night—well, there is something awfully depressing about it—something that makes one shudder and imagine uncanny things.

London Dark and Dismal.

London has for years been known as a city of brightly illuminated streets and equally bright and inviting shops. But now the whole scene has changed. Everything is dark and dismal, and one has to scurry across the streets like a rabbit for fear some dimly lit automobile should run one down.

Nevertheless there is movement—there is life. The streets still resound with the rumble of heavy traffic and the continual honk, honk of motor horns.

The darkness is accounted for by the fact that more than half the huge electric arc lamps are extinguished, and the few remaining alight are partly blackened over, so that the light shines to the ground in a queer looking circle. Shop lights are dimmed and shaded and no longer blaze forth with a brilliance that is as attractive as it is astounding.

In the market districts one no longer finds the flare of gas and paraffin lamps on the costermongers' stalls, and these little portable "shops" are now illuminated with small oil lamps or candles placed in bottles.

The tramway cars and motor omnibuses, which a few weeks ago moved through the main streets like gigantic glowworms, grow dimmer every night, and they are gradually decreasing as the government is requisitioning them for the front.

TURKEY BECOMING EXTINCT.

We'll Have to Find Another Center-piece For Thanksgiving Dinners.

It is a sad fact to state, but if the truth must be told it looks very much as if the great American turkey, the center of our Thanksgiving festivities, will after not many years become as extinct as the auk, says the Washington Star. According to the census in 1890 the number of turkeys that year was 12,000,000. The population at that time was at least a dozen million less than it is now. But the last census returns place the turkeys at only 3,088,708, their valuation being $6,005,818.

Hence it is easily seen that, while the turkey eating population is increasing by the hundreds of thousands, the fowls themselves are decreasing at an even greater rate. We have a nation of 90,000,000 people and only 3,000,000 turkeys.

Turkeys are very delicate birds, and in spite of their huge size they cannot stand the hardships that chickens can easily endure. By nature wild, they pine and die in confinement, yet if left to wander too young are killed by wet grass and vermin. They do not like to roost in a house like chickens, but prefer to sit in rows on the boughs of tall trees. Even in storms and blizzards they sit calmly as druids perched high on the swaying limbs and seemingly heedless of rain or cold. But put them in a warm house or in a cramped yard and they do not thrive. So the difficulty of raising them has been a large factor in the high price of their meat and their growing scarcity.

Closed and locked doors confronted them; and their summons elicited no response; while the first door, when broken in by a whole-souled kick, discovered nothing more satisfactory than an empty room, its bed bearing the imprint of a woman's body, but that woman gone.

From the one window, looking down the side of the house, Texas announced that the woman had not escaped by jumping out.

So it seemed that the three must have had warning of their arrival, after all; and presumably were now herded together in the adjoining room, which looked out over the veranda roof, waiting in fear and trembling for the assault that must soon come—and in fact immediately did.

But it met with more stubborn resistance than had been anticipated. The door had been barricaded from within—re-enforced by furniture placed against it. Four minutes and the united efforts of four men (including the bleary loafer of the barroom) were required to overcome its inert resistance. But even when it was down, the room was found to be as empty as the first.

Only the fingers of two hands gripping the edge of the veranda roof showed the way the fugitives had flown; and these vanished instantly as the room was invaded.

Followed a swift rush of hoofs down the dusty street, and a chorus of blasphemy in the hotel hallway; for Judith had headed the concerted rush for the staircase and contrived to block it for a full half minute by pretending to stumble and twist her ankle.

In spite of that alleged injury, she never limped, and wasn't a yard behind the first who broke from the hotel to the open, nor yet appreciably behind him in vaulting to saddle.

Well up the road a cloud of smoky dust half obscured the shapes of three who rode for their very lives.

The pursuit was off in a twinkling and well bunched—Marrophet's mount leading by a nose, Judith second, Hopi Jim and Texas but little in the rear. And in the first rush they seemed to gain; moment by moment they drew up on the flying cloud of dust.

Judith heard an oath muttered beside her and saw Marrophet jerking a revolver from its holster. The weapon swept up and to a level; but as the hammer fell, Judith's horse caromed heavily against the other, swinging it half a dozen feet aside, and deflecting the bullet hopelessly.

The shock of collision was so great that Marrophet kept his seat with difficulty. He turned toward Judith a face livid with rage.

Simultaneously, as if taking the shot as the signal for a fusillade, Judith saw Alan lean back over his horse's rump and open fire.

An instant later his companion, Barcus, imitated his example.

In immediate consequence, Texas dropped reins, slumped forward over the pommel, wobbled weakly in his saddle for a moment, then losing the stirrups, pitched headlong to the ground; while Hopi Jim's horse stopped short, precipitating his rider overhead, and dropped dead.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

The Upper Trail.

In the ten minutes' delay necessitated by this reverse, a number of more or less innocent bystanders picked up the man Texas and carried him off to breathe his last beneath a roof; Hopi Jim picked himself up, brushed his person tolerably clear of clouds of dust and profanity, and departed in search of a mount to replace the horse that had been shot under him, and Judith sat her horse calmly, smiling sweet insolence into the exasperated countenance of Marrophet.

Incidentally the fugitives disappeared round a bend in the road that led directly into the wild and barren heart of the Painted Hills.

In the brief interval that elapsed before his return with Hopi Jim, Marrophet contrived to persuade the bandit that Judith had been, at least indirectly, responsible for the catastrophe, with the upshot that, temporarily blinded to her fascinations by the glitter of nineteen thousand dollars in the near distance, Mr. Slade maintained his distance and a deaf ear to her blandishments. The only information as to their purpose that she was able to extract from either man, when the pursuing party turned aside from the main trail, some distance from Mesa, was that Hopi Jim knew a short cut through the range, via what he termed the upper trail, by which they hoped to be able to head the fugitives off before they could gain the desert on the far side of the hills.

Only at long intervals did they draw rein to permit Hopi Jim to make reconnaissance of the lower trail that threaded the valley on the far side of the ridge.

Toward noon he returned in haste from the last of these surveys—scrambling recklessly down the mountain-side and throwing himself upon his horse with the advice:

"We've headed 'em—can make it now if we ride like all get-out!"

For half an hour more they pushed on at the best speed to be obtained from their weary animals, at length drawing rein at a point where the trail crossed the ridge and widened out upon a long, broad ledge that overhung the valley of the lower trail, with a clear drop to the latter from the brink of a good two hundred feet.

One hasty look back and down into the valley evoked a grunt of satisfaction from Hopi Jim.

"Just in time," he asseverated. "Here they come! Ten minutes more . . ."

His smile answered Marrophet's with unspeakable cruel significance.

"Texas will sleep better tonight when he knows how I've squared the deal for him!" the bandit declared.

"What are you going to do?" Judith demanded, reining her horse in beside Marrophet as the latter dismounted.

A gesture drew her attention to a huge boulder poised insecurely on the very lip of the chasm.

"We're going to tip that over on your friends, Miss Judith!" Marrophet replied, with a smack of relish in his voice. "Simple—neat—efficient—eh? What more can you ask?"

She answered only with an irrepressible gesture of horror. Marrophet's laugh followed her as she turned away.

For some moments she strained her vision vainly, endeavoring to penetrate the turbulent currents of superheated air that filled the valley. Then she made out indistinctly the faintly marked line of the lower trail; and immediately she caught a glimpse of three small figures, mounted, toiling painfully toward the point where death awaited them like a bolt from the blue.

Hastily she glanced over-shoulder: Hopi Jim and Marrophet, ignoring her, were straining themselves against the boulder without budging it an inch, for all its apparent nicety of poise. For an instant a wild hope flashed through her mind, but it was immediately excoriated when Hopi Jim stepped back and uttered a few words of which only two—"dynamite" and "fuse"—reached her ears.

Kneeling beside the boulder he dug busily for an instant, then lodged the stick to his satisfaction, attached the fuse, and breaking off, edged on his belly to the edge of the cliff and looked down, carefully calculating the length of the fuse by the distance of the party down below from the spot where the rock must fall.

But while he was so engaged and Marrophet aided him, all eager interest, Judith was taking advantage of their disregard of her.

Hurriedly unbuttoning her jacket, she whipped a playing card from her pocket, a trey of hearts, and with the stub of a pencil scribbled three words on its face—"Danger! Go back!"

Then finding a small, flimsy bit of rock, she bound the card to it with a bit of string; and with one more backward glance to make sure she was not watched, approached the brink.

Hopi Jim was meticulously shortening the fuse, Marrophet kneeling by his side.

In the canyon below the three were within two minutes of the danger point.

It was no trick at all to drop the stone so that it fell within a dozen feet of the leading horseman.

She saw him rein in suddenly, dismount, cast a look aloft, then dismount and pick up the warning.

As the others joined him, he detached the card and showed it to them. At the same time Hopi Jim and Marrophet jumped up and ran back, each seizing and holding his horse by nose and bridle.

Constrained to do likewise lest she lose her mount, Judith waited with a lightened heart.

The explosion smote dull echoes from the flanks of the Painted Hills all drowsing in the noon-day hush: the boulder teetered reluctantly on the brink, then disappeared with a tearing sound followed by a rush of earth and gravel; a wide gap appeared in the brink of the trail.

Leaving Marrophet to hold the two frightened horses while the girl soothed her own, the bandit rushed to the edge, threw himself flat and swore bitterly, with an accent of grievance, as he rose.

From the canyon below a dull noise of galloping hoofs advertised too plainly the failure of their attempt.

And Hopi Jim turned back only to find Judith mounted, reining her horse in between him and Marrophet, and prepared to give emphasis to what she had to say with an automatic pistol that nestled snugly in her palm.

"One moment, Mr. Slade," she suggested evenly. "Just a moment before you break the sad news to Mr. Marrophet. I've something to say that needs your attention—likewise, your respect. It is this: I am parting company with you and Mr. Marrophet. I am riding on toward the west, by this trail. If either of you care to follow me—the automatic flashed ominously in the sun glare—"It will be with full knowledge of the consequences. Mr. Marrophet will enlighten you if you have any doubt of my ability to take care of myself in such affairs as this. If you are well advised, you will turn back and report failure to my father."

She nodded curtly and swung her horse round.

"And what shall I tell your father from you?" Marrophet demanded sharply.

"What you please," the girl replied, flashing an impassive smile over-shoulder. "But, since when I part company with you, I part with him as well—for all of me, you may tell him to go to the devil!"

"Well," Mr. Marrophet admitted confidentially to Mr. Slade, "I'm damned!"

"And that ain't all," Mr. Slade confided in Mr. Marrophet, whipping out his own revolver: "You're being held up, too. I'll take those guns of your'n, friend, and what else you've got about you that's of value, including your horse—and when you get back to old man Trine you can just tell him, with my best compliments, that I've quit the job and lit out after that daughter of his'n. She's a heap sight more attractive than nineteen thousand dollars, and not half so hard to earn!"

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Burnt Fingers.

Once she had lost touch with her father's creature, the girl drew rein and went on more slowly and cautiously.

Below her, in the valley, the lower trail wound its facile way. From time to time she could discern upon some naked stretch of its length a cloud of dust, or perhaps three mounted figures, scurrying madly on with fear of death snapping at their heels.

It was within an hour of midnight, a night bell-clear and bitter cold on the heights, and bright with moonlight, when Alan's party made its last pause and camped to rest against the dawn, unconscious of the fact that, a quarter of a mile above them, on the upper trail, a lonely woman paused when they paused and made her own camp on the edge of a sharp declivity.

The level shafts of the rising sun awakened her. She sat up, rubbed her eyes, yawned, stretched limbs stiff with the hardship of sleeping on an unyielding, sun-baked earth—and of a sudden started up, surprised by the grating of footsteps on the earth behind her.

Before she could turn, however, she was caught and wrapped in the arms of Hopi Jim.

She mustered all her strength and wits and will for one last struggle—and in a frenzied moment managed to break his hold a trifle, enough to enable her to snatch at the pistol hanging from her belt and present it at his head.

But it exploded harmlessly, spending its bullet on the blue of the morning sky. The bandit caught her wrist in time, thrust it aside and subjected it to such cruel pressure and such savage wrenchings that the pistol dropped from fingers numbed with pain.

And now all hint of mercy left his eyes; remained only the glare of rage. He put forth all his strength in turn, and Judith was as a child in his hands. In half a minute he had her helpless, in as much time more her back was breaking across his knee, while he bound her with loop after loop of his rawhide lariat.

Then, leaving her momentarily supine on the ground, Hopi Jim caught and unhooked her horse, and without troubling to saddle it, lifted the girl to its back, and placed her there, face upward, catching her hands and feet, as they fell on either flank of the animal, with more loops of that unbreakable rawhide, and deftly placing the master knot of the hitch that bound this human pack well beyond possibility of her reach.

She panted a prayer for mercy. He laughed in her face, bent and kissed her brutally, and stepped back laughing to admire his handiwork.

Thus he stood for an instant between the horse and the edge of the declivity, a fair mark, stark against the sky, for one who stood in the valley below, holding his rifle with eager fingers, waiting for just such opportunity with the same impatience with which he had waited for it ever since the noise of debris kicked over the edge by the struggling man and woman had drawn his attention to what was going on above.

Alan pressed the trigger and the shot sounded clear in the morning stillness, Judith saw a look of aggrieved amazement cross the face of Hopi Jim Slade.

Then he threw his hands out, clawed blindly at the air, staggered, reeled against the horse's flank so heavily that it shied in fright, and abruptly shot from sight over the edge of the bluff.

Lime In Building.

The use of lime as binding material for mortar originated in the remote past. It is probable that some savages when using limestone rocks to confine their fire noticed that the stones were changed by the action of the heat. A passing shower may have slaked the lime to a paste, and they discovered that the paste was smooth and sticky and was a better material than clay to fill the crevices in their crude dwellings. From this discovery it was but a step to add sand to the paste in order to produce a mortar.

READY FOR AIR INVADERS.

Searchlights Scour Sky and Maxims Perched on Many High Buildings Await Foe—Visitors Shudder and Imagine Uncanny Things Until They Become Accustomed to Gloom.

The average Londoner has changed. He has cast off his cloak of indifference and now become an interested spectator of the activities around him. A battery of artillery rattles through the streets and he pauses to gaze in wonder at those harmless looking steel tubes that will soon be hurling death and destruction at the enemy.

During the day his thoughts dwell with the allies, picturing them in a superhuman struggle as best he can from the scary reports of the newspapers. But at night he turns his attention to the skies and thinks of Zeppelins. "Will they attack us tonight?" is his constant question.

In any event London is fully prepared to meet such a formidable foe as the Zeppelin, for searchlights scour the sky for them at night, and Maxim guns are perched on many high buildings waiting, ever ready to spit forth their deadly missiles and bring the aircraft down into the busy streets.

To a stranger London would appear as a city of the dead, for the first thing that strikes one is the absence of light. During the day everything is normal, but at night—well, there is something awfully depressing about it—something that makes one shudder and imagine uncanny things.

London Dark and Dismal.

London has for years been known as a city of brightly illuminated streets and equally bright and inviting shops. But now the whole scene has changed. Everything is dark and dismal, and one has to scurry across the streets like a rabbit for fear some dimly lit automobile should run one down. Nevertheless there is movement—there is life. The streets still resound with the rumble of heavy traffic and the continual honk, honk of motor horns.

The darkness is accounted for by the fact that more than half the huge electric lamps are extinguished, and the few remaining alight are partly blackened over, so that the light shines to the ground in a queer looking circle. Shop lights are dimmed and shaded and no longer blaze forth with a brilliance that is as attractive as it is astounding.

In the market districts one no longer finds the flare of gas and paraffin lamps on the costermongers' stalls, and these little portable "shops" are now illuminated with small oil lamps or candles placed in bottles.

The tramway cars and motor omnibuses, which a few weeks ago moved through the main streets like gigantic glowworms, grow dimmer every night, and they are gradually decreasing as the government is requisitioning them for the front.
